NOTE TO THE REVISED EDITION.

THE earlier edition of this work appeared in 1876. Considerable alterations have been introduced in the present edition; the text has been in some cases altered, generally with closer adherence to readings of the MSS.; the notes have been revised and added to; the introduction has been almost re-written; and a short account of the manner in which the play was put upon the stage has been added. This last feature it is hoped may have a special interest and value, in view of the interest recently aroused in our Schools and Universities in the representation of Greek drama. For all these alterations and additions Mr Gray is alone responsible.

In this, as in the earlier edition, quotations from classical authors in the notes have been usually given at length instead of bare reference to chapter or line, and where the object is to illustrate an idiom or to explain a difficulty of language a translation has been given of the passage cited. The ideal student doubtless looks out and correctly construes the passages to which his editor refers him; in practice such blank finger-posts are very generally neglected, especially by younger students. On the other hand varieties of reading are in some instances dwelt upon at some length, principally where the discussion of them tends to throw light upon grammar and the principles of Greek construction, or is rendered necessary by the adoption of a new reading in the text.

CAMBRIDGE, Feb. 1886.

INTRODUCTION.

In accordance with the usual practice of Euripides, the Hercules Furens opens with a prologue, in which the poet briefly sums up the main incidents in the lives of the principal actors in the drama, and explains such circumstances as are necessary to a proper understanding of the complication with which the play opens. This prologue is spoken by Amphitryon, the reputed father of Heracles. He was the son of Alcaeus and grandson of Perseus: his early youth had been spent in the home of Electryon, his father's brother, king of Mycenae, in whose service he distinguished himself in a war with the Taphii, a nation of pirates inhabiting islands which fringe the coast of Acarnania and Leucadia. Having accidentally slain Electryon, Amphitryon was expelled from Mycenae by Sthenelus, Electryon's brother, who succeeded to the throne and bequeathed it to his son Eurystheus. From Mycenae Amphitryon repaired to Thebes, where he was hospitably received and purified by Creon, his uncle on his mother's side. He there married Alcmene, daughter of Electryon, and, at her request, undertook to avenge the death of her brothers, who had been treacherously slain by the Taphii. During his absence on this expedition Alcmene was visited by Zeus in the form of Amphitryon, and by him became the mother of Heracles. From his birth and throughout life the hero was regarded with unremitting malignity by Hera who, when he was yet in his cradle, sent two serpents to destroy him. Later in life it was at her instigation, or owing to the yet more powerful decrees of fate, that he was induced to undergo his celebrated twelve labours, imposed on him by his kinsman Eurystheus. As the reward of these labours he claimed the restoration of himself and his father Amphitryon to their ancestral home in Mycenae.

At the time of the opening of the play eleven of these labours have been successfully accomplished: one only, the last and most dangerous, remains incomplete, viz. the task of bringing the dog Cerberus from the infernal world. Already Heracles has left his wife, Megara, Creon's daughter, with his children under the protection of the aged Amphitryon, and has departed on this last quest.

For many months his return was delayed while he was engaged in procuring the release from Hades of Theseus, who had accompanied his friend Pirithous thither with the intention of carrying off Persephone. Meanwhile a report began to prevail of the death of Heracles. This rumour was diligently spread by Eurystheus, and encouraged by it, some of the poorer and worthless class of Thebans were prompted to revolt from the rule of Creon, and to bring about one of those dynastic revolutions which form so common a feature in all Greek mythology and early history. They recalled to the throne one Lycus, a native of Dirphys in Euboea, the son or descendant of a former Lycus, who had in the early days of Theban history usurped the crown from Laius, son of Labdacus, and who, together with his wife Dirce, is chiefly known in mythology in connection with the tale of Antiope and her two sons Amphion and Zethus. To strengthen himself in his usurped position, the new king Lycus not only slays Creon, but proposes to put to death Amphitryon and the whole family of Heracles, whom he supposes to be dead. It is at this crisis that the play opens. The scene is laid before the royal palace of Thebes, where Amphitryon and the family of Heracles, who are shut out from the house, are congregated about the altar of Zeus the Saviour.

Both as regards the legend which he has adopted, and his mode of developing the plot as well as his hero's character, Euripides differs entirely from Sophocles in the Trachiniae, in his treatment of the subject of the madness of Heracles. would be unsafe to affirm, though there is ground for believing it, that the Hercules Furens is of later composition than Sophocles' play; but the question is of little literary interest, inasmuch as neither play exhibits any token of having been modelled on the lines of its predecessor. One passage of our play, the speech of Heracles when moved to unwonted tears (lines 1353-1357), certainly bears a marked resemblance to Trachiniae, 1071-5, but the resemblance is due to a coincidence in the dramatic situation, the weaker feminine nature of the hero revealing itself in calamity; fine as both passages are, they are merely the working out of a commonplace, of which Wolsey's speech in Henry the Eighth (Act III. sub fin.) affords a familiar example.

It was not without reason that Euripides rejected the more romantic legend of Trachis in favour of the less dramatic Theban story of the madness of Heracles. The latter legend, as forming one of a group of myths connected with the Return of the Heraclidae, provided him with a subject combining historical fact with poetic fiction in a manner which was specially adapted to his theorizing genius, and furnished the ground-plan for a grand patriotic drama of the type of Cymbeline. It was the patriotic boast of the Athenians, on which on a well-known occasion (see Herodotus IX. 27) they scarcely laid less stress than on the glories of Marathon, that they had admitted the Heraclidae to their country when a home was denied them by all other Hellenic states, and had fought for them against their oppressor, Eurystheus. The jealousy of rival powers might dispute the purely historical claims of Athens to the hegemony of Hellas; in the Hercules Furens Euripides discovers an unquestioned argument in favour of the Athenian ascendancy in the legend, which every Greek admitted as part and parcel of the national mythology, that Athens had championed the cause of the ancestors of Sparta's kings against the hostility of Thebes and Argos. It is clearly with this motive of associating the national Hellenic hero with Attic cults that Euripides draws attention (line 613) to the otherwise irrelevant incident of the initiation of Heracles at Eleusis, and offers an actiological explanation (1328 foll.) of the fact, mentioned by Plutarch, that in the numerous Thesea scattered throughout the Attic demes the worship of Heracles and Theseus was united. This was especially the case in the Theseum at Athens, in the sculptures of which the labours of the two heroes are associated.

We have no direct evidence of the date of the composition of the Hercules Furens, but weighing the evidence of style, language and thought we shall perhaps not err in placing it among the latest works of Euripides. Reasons have been assigned in the note on line 637 for the belief that it was written, like the Bacchae, at the court of the Macedonian king, Archelaus, and consequently in the last two or three years of his life. If this hypothesis be correct we may profitably compare the play with the Oedipus at Colonus of Sophocles, which must have been written at nearly the same date and under similar circumstances. There is much that is common to the themes of the two plays-the Theban hero in exile and suffering, the upstart tyrant, the brilliant knight-errant Theseus, the sanctuary on Attic soil and the promised deification. On the supposition that the Hercules Furens belongs to its author's latest work there is an eminent fitness in its selection by Browning's Balaustion as the Apology of Euripides, vindicating the undiminished vigour of the productions of his old age not less effectively than the chorus of the Oedipus at Colonus served in the familiar story to silence the detractors of Sophocles.

To the same conclusion as regards the date of the play we are drawn by the tone of the theological speculations which Euripides has freely introduced in it. In the attacks on the folly and wickedness of the gods of Greek mythology which he puts in the mouth of more than one of his characters (see especially lines 339 foll., 501, 655, 1087, 1315 foll.), Euripides clearly expresses his own sentiments, influenced no doubt by the teachings of his master Anaxagoras. But from lines 1342 foll. in which Heracles repels the charge of immorality brought against the gods by Theseus, it is clear that the attacks of the poet are directed merely against the popular legendary beliefs of the day, the ἀοιδῶν δύστηνοι λόγοι authenticated by Homer and Hesiod. Zeus is to him a name to which it is difficult to attach any personality (line 1263, with which compare Troades, 884), but δ $\theta \epsilon \delta s$, he asserts, must from his very nature be beyond human desires and human failings (1345). In this last passage, as well as in lines 757—9 and 772—3, we observe the same marks of that reasonable religion which so strongly characterizes the Bacchae.

In his views of society not less than in his theological speculations Euripides in the Hercules Furens displays an independence of the prejudices of his contemporaries which shows a marked approximation to modern attitudes of thought. Nothing is more remarkable than the prominence which he gives to the domestic affections in the character of Heracles. The conception that parental and conjugal love was a fitting adjunct to the heroic character was entirely novel to the Athenian mind. Filial piety and maternal care had their types and exponents in tragedy, such as Antigone and Andromache; but the weak and semi-barbarous Admetus is perhaps the only tragic character who expresses real concern for his wife. This modern attitude of Euripides is equally conspicuous in other matters on which he proclaims his divergence from the popular conventions of his time, e.g. as regards the use of the bow, the Philistinism of wealth, the morality of suicide (lines 188 foll., 669—672, 1347—1350).

If we may judge from the comparative rarity of quotations from it in classical authors, as well as the fact that (like the Helena and Electra) it has been preserved for us in only one MS. of authority*, the Hercules Furens was not a popular play in ancient times. Nor on the whole is this surprising; it delineates no absorbing passion, its principal characters are framed in no heroic mould, though there is abundance of incident there is no strikingly novel situation, and the dénoûment has none of the occidental splendour either of the Trachiniae or the Oedipus at Colonus. Its constructive defects have been especially hardly dealt with by modern critics. K. O. Müller can only say of it that "it is altogether wanting in the satisfaction which nothing but a unity of ideas pervading the drama could produce. It is hardly possible to conceive that the poet should have combined in one piece two actions so totally different as the deliverance of the children of Heracles from the persecutions of the bloodthirsty Lycus, and their murder by the hands of their frantic father, merely because he wished to surprise the audience by a sudden and unexpected change to the precise contrary of what had gone before." Such has been the general voice of German criticism; but to us this censure seems too severe, inasmuch as it arises from a failure to grasp the moral lesson of the play. The elder tragedians find a moral significance in the Greek myths as illustrating the infallibility of the divine justice, and the necessary connection of suffering with the antecedent sin of the sufferer or his kindred. Euripides cannot trace this even-handed justice in the dealings of the gods with men; the government of the world is mere anarchic $\tau \dot{v} \chi \eta$, dependent on the whim of the Olympians and only rendered tolerable by human affection and sympathy. Unlike Oedipus, Heracles in the profundity of his sorrow finds no consolation in the prospect of divine honours after death; to him such offers are πάρεργα τῶν κακῶν. Το Euripides the vicissitudes of joy and sorrow appear to succeed one another in a purely arbitrary fashion; the triumph of the moment is ever overshadowed by the sense of coming disaster. The key-note of the play is struck in the opening words of the chorus beginning 348, "The glad strains of Phoebus die away in the Linus dirge; victory is swallowed up in death." We have a significant premonition of the impending catastrophe in the vague bodings of Amphitryon (587, 594); and the unconscious irony of the chorus who see in Heracles' triumph patent proof of the divine approbation of righteousness (811 foll.), even at the very moment when the instrument of Hera's meaningless malignity appears above them, is meant to convey the lesson that the unexpected is also the inevitable, and that human interpretations of the divine judgment are blindest when they seem most certain.

If the verdict of criticism as regards the Hercules Furens has been generally unfavourable it must be admitted that writers both classical and modern have found in it matter for admiration as well as imitation. Cicero refers to the play twice (Academica, II. § 89, De Senectute, § 2). The Hercules Furens of Seneca takes its plot directly from Euripides' play. To us it is more interesting to observe that the most faithful and perhaps the most successful of modern transcripts of Greek drama, the Samson Agonistes, owes its conception and design to the Hercules Furens of Euripides. Milton's play, it is true, is in no sense an imitation of that of Euripides; it is rather a reminiscence of it. But in two scenes of his play Milton appears consciously to have had the Hercules Furens in view. The first is that where Harapha taunts and threatens Samson, which should be compared with the scene between Lycus and Amphitryon; the second is that where the Messenger announces to Manoah and the Chorus of his compatriots the destruction of the Philistine theatre by Samson; the resemblance of this scene to that in the Hercules Furens between the Messenger, Amphitryon and the Chorus is too close to be accidental. It is worth observing, in connection with what has been said as to the date of the Hercules Furens, that the Samson Agonistes was Milton's latest work, and the personal reference contained in Samson's lament for his blindness suggests a comparison with the ode on old age contained in the *Hercules Furens.

Not the least tribute to the high poetic merits of the Hercules Furens is the admirable rendering of this "perfect piece" in Browning's Aristophanes' Apology, which combines original force with scholarly translation in a very remarkable degree.

On the Representation of the Hercules Furens on the Athenian Stage.

THREE actors seem to have been employed in the representation of the play. The parts were probably assigned thus:—

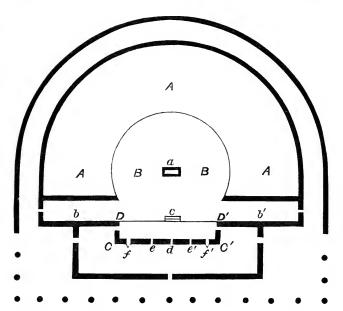

$$\Pi \rho \omega \tau \alpha \gamma \omega \nu \iota \sigma \tau \dot{\eta} s \begin{cases} \text{Heracles,} \\ \text{Lycus.} \end{cases}$$

$$\Delta \epsilon \upsilon \tau \epsilon \rho \alpha \gamma \omega \nu \iota \sigma \tau \dot{\eta} s \end{cases} \begin{cases} \text{Megara,} \\ \text{Theseus,} \\ \text{Iris.} \end{cases}$$

$$T \rho \iota \tau \alpha \gamma \omega \nu \iota \sigma \tau \dot{\eta} s \end{cases} \begin{cases} \text{Amphitryon,} \\ \text{Messenger,} \\ \text{Lyssa.} \end{cases}$$

* Dr Johnson's criticism of the Samson Agonistes coincides curiously with Müller's on the Hercules Furens: "It is only by a blind confidence in the reputation of Milton, that a drama can be praised in which the intermediate parts have neither cause nor consequence, neither hasten nor retard the catastrophe."

PLAN OF THE THEATRE OF DIONYSUS AT ATHENS.

- A. The $\theta \ell \alpha \tau \rho \rho \nu$, where the spectators sat on concentric rows of benches: behind it a lofty covered portico.
- B. The ὀρχήστρα, containing (a) the θυμέλη, (bb') πάροδοι, (c) steps to the λογεῖον.
- CC'. The σκηνή with three doors, viz. (d) βασίλειος θύρα usually reserved for the πρωταγωνιστής, (εε') side-doors used by the 2nd and 3rd actors.
 - In the $\sigma \kappa \eta \nu \dot{\eta}$ also are (ff'') the $\pi \epsilon \rho i \alpha \kappa \tau \sigma i$, revolving cylinders used for shifting the scene.
- CD, C'D' are the παρασκήνια with entrances.
- The space enclosed by DCC'D' is the $\pi\rho\sigma\sigma\kappa\dot{\eta}\nu\iota\sigma\nu$, the front part of which was called $\lambda\sigma\gamma\epsilon\hat{\iota}\sigma\nu$.

Behind the $\sigma \kappa \eta \nu \dot{\eta}$ were the actors' retiring rooms, &c.

Aristotle (Poetics ch. 12) gives the divisions of a tragedy as follows:—

"The parts of a tragedy are $\pi\rho\delta\lambda \circ\gamma \circ s$, ἐπεισόδιον, ἔξοδος, χορικόν, and the last is divided into πάροδος and στάσιμον, both of which are performed by the whole Chorus, while the pieces delivered from the stage and the κομμοί are performed only by individuals. The $\pi\rho\delta\lambda \circ\gamma \circ s$ is all that part of a tragedy which precedes the πάροδος of the chorus; the ἐπεισόδιον all that part which comes between entire choral odes; the ἔξοδος that part which has no choral ode after it. Of the χορικόν the πάροδος is the first speech of the whole chorus; the στάσιμον is a choral ode without anapaests or trochees; the κομμός is a lamentation performed by the chorus and the actors on the stage together."

Before the commencement of the play the proscenium was probably concealed from the spectators by a curtain $(a\vec{v}\lambda aia)$, which was lowered by means of a roller through a slit in the floor between the $\lambda oye\hat{i}o\nu$ and proscenium.

Πρόλογος (1—106). The $\sigma\kappa\eta\nu\dot{\eta}$ represents the front $(\pi\rho\dot{\rho}m\nu\lambda a,$ 523) of the royal palace of Thebes; it has three doors, through the centre one of which the interior court, $a\dot{\nu}\lambda\dot{\eta}$, of the Andronitis is supposed to be visible (see 713—5 and 747), containing the altar of Zeus ($\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\dot{\iota}a$, 599, $\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\chi\dot{\alpha}\rho a$ Δ $\dot{\iota}$ os, 922). In the centre of the proscenium stands the altar of $Z\epsilon\dot{\nu}s$ $\sigma\omega\tau\dot{\eta}\rho$ (48). Around it are grouped Amphitryon, Megara and the three sons of Heracles.

Πάροδος (107—137). The Chorus, consisting of 15 aged Cadmeans, enter the $\partial \rho \chi \dot{\eta} \sigma \tau \rho a$ by the $\pi \dot{a} \rho o \delta o \iota$. As they chant their entrance song they slowly mount the platform of the $\theta \nu \mu \dot{\epsilon} \lambda \eta$: the epode (130 foll.) is sung when they have grouped themselves around it.

First ἐπεισόδιον (138—347). Lycus enters from a door in one of the παρασκήνια (see 139, δωμάτων πέλας not δωμάτων ἔξω); this door was supposed to lead from the direction of the city. He is attended by $\pi\rho \acute{o}\sigma\pi ολοι$ (240, 332). At 338 Megara quits the stage by the R. side door of the $\sigma κηνή$. Amphitryon remains facing the altar of Zeus until 347, and then retires by the L. side door. The Coryphaeus of the Chorus takes his place on the λογείον while he joins in the dialogue.

First $\sigma \tau \acute{a} \sigma \iota \mu o \nu$ (348—450). The Chorus perform a solemn dance in the $\emph{d} \rho \chi \acute{\eta} \sigma \tau \rho a$ while they chant this $\emph{d} \rho \mathring{\eta} \nu o s$. At the end of each $\sigma \tau \acute{a} \sigma \iota \mu o \nu$ they return to their place around the $\emph{d} \nu \mu \acute{e} \lambda \eta$.

Second $\epsilon \pi \epsilon \iota \sigma \delta \delta \iota \sigma \nu$ (442—636). The anapaestic lines (442—450) are chanted as the Chorus retire to the $\theta \nu \mu \epsilon \lambda \eta$. Megara appears from the R. side door of the $\sigma \kappa \eta \nu \eta$ with her children; then Amphitryon from the L. door. They wear garlands such as were placed on the dead (526, 562). At 514 Heracles appears; he enters the $\delta \rho \chi \eta \sigma \tau \rho a$ by the $\pi \dot{a} \rho o \delta \sigma$ and mounts to the $\lambda o \gamma \epsilon \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \nu$ by steps immediately facing the $\sigma \kappa \eta \nu \eta$ (523). At 621 all the actors leave the stage by the central door.

Second στάσιμον (637-700.

Third $\epsilon_{\pi\epsilon\iota\sigma}\delta\delta\omega\nu$ (701—762). Amphitryon and Lycus with his $\pi\rho\delta\sigma\pi\delta\omega$ enter as before. Megara is perhaps visible through the central door sitting at the altar in the interior court; Lycus makes his exit at this door at 725. The Coryphaeus mounts to the proscenium and advances to the central door (747). Lycus' cries are heard within.

Third στάσιμον (763-814).

Fourth $\epsilon \pi \epsilon \iota \sigma \delta \delta \iota \sigma \nu$ (815—1015). Iris and Lyssa are shown above the $\sigma \kappa \eta \nu \eta$ in aerial cars, which are apparently lowered by the $\mu \eta \chi a \nu \eta$ until they rest on the roof of the palace, from whence Lyssa is supposed to be able to see the interior court (867). At 874 Iris is carried aloft out of sight, while Lyssa in her car (880) is lowered behind the $\sigma \kappa \eta \nu \eta$. The notes of the $a \nu \lambda \delta s$ are heard within the palace (896), followed by uproar and the crashing of falling masonry. The Messenger appears from the L. side door of the palace. A short κομμός follows (910—921). The Messenger retires at the door at which he entered (1015).

Fourth $\sigma \tau \acute{a}\sigma \iota \mu \rho \nu$ (1016—1038). This brief ode though not strophically arranged was probably sung by the entire Chorus. While they chant the scene is shifted. By a revolution of the $\pi \epsilon \rho i a \kappa \tau o i$ (1029) the background representing the palacefront is changed to one showing the $\pi \epsilon \rho \iota \sigma \tau \acute{\nu} \lambda \iota \rho \nu$, or inner court, shattered and in ruins: the $\pi a \rho a \sigma \kappa \acute{\nu} \iota \nu a$ are likewise changed. At the same time the $\acute{\epsilon} \kappa \kappa \acute{\nu} \kappa \lambda \eta \mu a$, (a platform moving on wheels,) brings before the spectators' view Heracles represented as asleep, bound to a broken column and surrounded by the forms of his wife and children.

*Εξοδος (1039—end). Amphitryon enters at L. side door. κομμός (1042—1087) between the Chorus and Amphitryon. Heracles awakes: Amphitryon does not approach him (1112) until line 1123, when he looses his bonds. Theseus enters from one of the πάροδοι and addresses Amphitryon before he catches sight of Heracles and his slaughtered family. By his solicitations Heracles is at length induced to rise (1397) and quits the stage leaning on Theseus' shoulder. The αὐλαία is drawn up as the Chorus retire chanting.

NOTES.

- 3. The imperfect of τίκτω is very commonly employed where an aorist would seem more in place, e.g. in 866; see L. and S. The explanation lies in the fact that the present τίκτω has a quasi-perfect meaning, 'am the parent of'. Hence οἱ τίκτοντες as well as οἱ τεκόντες, 'parents'. The tragedians use indifferently the open and contracted forms of 'Ηρακλέης: the gen. 'Ηρακλέους is a trisyllable in Trach. 406, and in a choric passage of this play (v. 806) the form 'Ηρακλέος is used (in 863 the MSS. reading 'Ηρακλέος is probably an error): in 171 'Ἡράκλεις is the vocative form, in 175 'Ἡράκλεις.
 - 5. Notice the quantity of στάχυς.
 - ἔσωσε, 'spared'.
- 7. τεκνοῦσι, 'peopled with their children's children'. More commonly τεκνοῦν = to beget, but there is no ground for suspecting corruption here. The use of the present for a past tense is particularly frequent after a relative: compare 796, δs γῶν τέκνων τέκνωις μεταμείβει. It occurs also in lines 252, 428, 903, 967, and is common in Latin, as Virgil, Aen. XI. 172, magna tropaea ferunt quos dat tua dextera leto.
- 11. Dindorf (against MSS.) reads $\tilde{\eta}_s...\tilde{\nu}\mu\epsilon\nu$ aloist, but for the transitive sense of $\sigma\nu\nu$ alaláfeu we may compare the passive use of the simple verb in Baech. 593, $B\rho b\mu ios$ δs àlaláfe τai $\sigma \tau \epsilon \gamma as$ $\epsilon \sigma \omega$. Notice the double dative of the instrument, 'whom they welcomed in chorus with bridal strains on the reed-pipe'.
- 14. $\pi \epsilon \nu \theta \epsilon \rho o i$ s here $= \gamma \alpha \mu \beta \rho o i s$, affines, and refers not to Creon only but to his family generally: so in Hipp. 635 the persons called $\gamma \alpha \mu \beta \rho o i$ are styled $\pi \epsilon \nu \theta \epsilon \rho o i$ in the next line. See the derivation of the word in L. and S.
- 15. 'Αργεῖα τείχη and Κυκλωπίαν πόλιν alike mean Mycenae, which in the time of Eur. had fallen under the hegemony of the neighbouring city of Argos. Strabo (VIII. 377) notes that the tragic poets continually confuse the two names and sites. The error was no doubt in part due to the differing applications of the name by Homer, who uses it to mean either the town, the district of Argolis, the Peloponnesus or continental Greece generally. Concerning the so-called Cyclopian remains at Mycenae see the note on 944.

- 18. è $\xi \epsilon v_F a \rho i \xi \omega v$, 'seeking to alleviate'; in the middle voice (infra 81), it has the sense 'to make practicable'.
- 20. $\dot{\epsilon}\xi\eta\mu\epsilon\rho\hat{\omega}\sigma\alpha\iota$, 'to clear', referring to the suppression of brigandage and piracy commonly attributed to Heracles. This is enumerated among his labours in 400; cp. also 225, 851.
- 21. τοῦ χρεὼν μέτα, 'in accordance with destiny'; so μετὰ τῶν νόμων, μετὰ τοῦ λόγον. χρεών is indeclinable here as in Hipp. 1256. It is a participle neuter of χρή, standing for χρεόν, or χρε-y-ον: -ων is a lengthening of -ον to compensate for the loss of the spirant y, which appears as ι in χρεῖοs, χρεία; compare πόλεωs for πολε-y-οs.
- 26. $\delta \dot{\eta}$ is used exactly as it is after a parenthesis, to call attention to a new departure in the narrative. 'Well, there is a story'—
- 27. εὐνήτωρ is the form which appears in the MSS. both here and in 97; but compare $\theta o w \dot{\alpha} \tau \omega \rho$, $\pi o w \dot{\alpha} \tau \omega \rho$, both of which are in regular use in tragic senarii.
- 28. δεσπόζειν elsewhere invariably governs a genitive: cp. the use of κρατείν with acc. in 50.
- 29. λευκοπώλω, an epithet of the Dioscuri, of whom Amphion and Zethus are the Theban counterparts.
- 31. $\pi \alpha \hat{\imath}$ s, probably simply 'a descendant'. $\pi \alpha \tau \rho \delta s$ should be taken not with $\delta \hat{\imath}$, but with $\tau \alpha \dot{\imath} \tau \delta r$ $\delta r o \mu a$ in the sense $\tau \alpha \dot{\imath} \tau \delta r$ $\tau \hat{\psi}$ $\pi \alpha \tau \rho i$ $\delta r o \mu a$, as appears from Helena, 487, $\delta r o \mu a$ $\delta \hat{\epsilon}$ $\tau \alpha \dot{\imath} \tau \hat{\epsilon} r$ $\tau \hat{\eta} s$ $\dot{\epsilon} \mu \hat{\eta} s$ $\dot{\epsilon} \chi \sigma \sigma \hat{\tau} s$ is $\dot{\epsilon} \lambda \lambda \eta$ $\tau \sigma \sigma i \delta \hat{\epsilon}$ $\dot{\epsilon} r r \sigma i \delta \hat{\epsilon} \rho r \sigma i \delta \hat{\epsilon}$ ' $\dot{\epsilon} r r \sigma i \delta r \sigma i \delta \hat{\epsilon}$ ' $\dot{\epsilon} r r \sigma i \delta r \sigma i$
- 34. νοσοῦσαν, a common Greek metaphor, in prose as well as verse writers. Cp. 273, 542 and Hdt. V. 28, $\dot{\eta}$ Μίλητος νοσήσασα στάσι.
- 35. ἀνημμένον, 'the tie that binds me to Creon'; a common use of ἀνάψαι, 'to form a marriage connection.' Compare the play on the double meaning of the words in 478.
- 40. $\dot{\omega}s$ $\phi \delta \nu \omega$ $\sigma \beta \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \eta$ $\phi \dot{\epsilon} \nu \sigma \nu$, 'with blood to blot out blood,' i.e. by murdering the children to efface the memory of Creon's murder and protect himself from its consequences.
- 41. εἴ τι δὴ χρὴ κἄμὶ. καὶ expresses a certain modesty. Soph. Phil. 193, εἴ τι κάγὼ φρονῷ, 'if my poor judgment serve'.

- 43. μήτρωσω, i.e. Creon and his sons; the poet has so far omitted to mention the murder of Megara's brothers, which we are only informed of in line 539. μήτρωs, strictly meaning 'maternal uncle,' includes other persons standing in a similar relationship, like $\pi \epsilon \nu \theta \epsilon \rho o \dot{\nu}$ in 14.
- 53. ἐκ γὰρ ἐσφραγισμένοι, tmesis for ἐξεσφραγ. For the practice of sealing doors see Becker's Charicles, p. 270 (Eng. translation).
- 59. ἔλεγχον is the so-called accusative in apposition with the sentence, a construction of which this play affords many and some very remarkable instances, e.g. 978, 992, 1363. These accusatives are in their nature cognate, and the case is due to the general transitive idea of the preceding sentence; it is immaterial that the verb (as here $\tau \nu \chi \epsilon \hat{\nu} \nu$) does not govern an accusative; comp. Bacch. 1099 θύρσους ἵεσαν δι' αἰθέρος | Πενθέως, στόχον δύστηνον, where not Pentheus, but the act of throwing is the $\sigma \tau \delta \chi \sigma s$.
- 61. στρατηλατήσας as having the sense of ήγησάμενος here governs a genitive, as it does Rhesus 276, ἀνῆρ γὰρ ἀλκῆς μυρίας στρατηλατῶν; elsewhere it takes a dative. κλεινά is adverbial=κλεινῶς, for which cp. 383 ἀχάλινα, 1054 ἀτρεμαΐα, 1093 μετάρσι οὐ βέβαια.
- 62. των θείων is the reading of Dindorf and Nauck for των θεων. Dobree ϵκ θεων.
- 63. Το οὖτ' ἐs πατέρα we should expect a corresponding οὖτ' ἐs πόσιν, but the construction is varied in line 67 to κἄμ' ἔδωκε παιδί σῷ.
- 66. $\hat{\eta}$ s is governed by $\pi\epsilon\rho l$, and $\epsilon\rho\omega\tau \iota$ (scil. $\alpha\dot{\nu}\tau\hat{\eta}$ s) is an explanatory afterthought; 'for which, that is through desire of it, long spears are launched at its fortunate possessors'. The causal dative is often used by Eur. in place of διά and acc. Cp. Bacch. 1120, $\mu\eta\delta\dot{\epsilon}$ ταῖs $\dot{\epsilon}\mu\alpha$ îs $\dot{\epsilon}$ μαρτίαισι παῖδα σὸν κατακτάνηs.
- 68. 'Bestowing on Heracles a noble bride'. εὖνήν stands for ἄλοχον, since the father was said συνοικίζειν τὴν θυγατέρα $τ \hat{\omega}$ ἀνδρί.
- 69. 'Are dead and flown'; for the metaphor cp. 510, 1186 and Med. 439, alòws...alθερία ἀνέπτα. ἐκεῖνα means Creon and Heracles and the past happy life associated with them.
- 71. 'Whom I am keeping under my wings, having gathered them under me, as a bird its young'. $\dot{\nu}\phi\epsilon\iota\mu\ell\nu\eta$ is probably middle, as in Phoen. 30, $\tau \partial \nu \ \dot{\epsilon}\mu\partial\nu \ \dot{\omega}\delta\iota\nu\omega\nu \ \pi\dot{\sigma}\nu\sigma\nu \ | \ \mu\alpha\sigma\tau\sigma\hat{\iota}s \ \dot{\nu}\phi\epsilon\hat{\iota}\tau\sigma$, 'she put to her breasts the offspring of my labour'; if it be passive it means 'crouching', as in Antig. 531, $\dot{\omega}s \ \dot{\epsilon}\chi\iota\delta\nu' \ \dot{\nu}\phi\epsilon\iota\mu\dot{\epsilon}\nu\eta \ | \ \dot{\lambda}\eta\theta\sigma\nu\sigma\dot{\alpha} \ \dot{\mu}' \ \dot{\epsilon}\xi\dot{\epsilon}\pi\iota\nu\epsilon s$.
- 73. $\pi \iota \tau \nu \omega \nu \dots a \dot{\upsilon} \delta \hat{q}$, the singular is used after ol $\delta \dot{\epsilon}$ by a common attraction to $\ddot{q}\lambda \lambda os$: comp. 79, 80.

5 I

- 75. $\ddot{\eta}\xi\epsilon_{\iota}$, 'when will he return,' the usual meaning of $\ddot{\eta}\kappa\omega$ in tragedy: comp. 146, 335, 601. Thus Aristophanes (Kanae 1153) represents Euripides as censuring Aeschylus for tautology in the line $\ddot{\eta}\kappa\omega$ γàρ ἐs γ $\ddot{\eta}\nu$ τήνδε καὶ κατέρχομαι, on which he wisely remarks $\ddot{\eta}\kappa\omega$ δὲ ταὐτόν ἐστι τῷ κατέρχομαι.—τῷ νέψ, 'by their youth'. Andr. 183, κακόν γε θνητοῖς τὸ νέον.
 - 77. We have adopted Kirchhoff's correction for θαυμάζω.
- 82. $\epsilon \kappa \beta \alpha \hat{\imath} \mu \epsilon \nu$ $\ddot{\alpha} \nu$, 'we cannot cross'; the protasis ϵl $\theta \epsilon \lambda \alpha \iota \mu \epsilon \nu$ is suppressed.
- 88. 'It is not easy for a man to give advice offhand on such matters, treating them with careless haste'. The pause of the line shows that $d\nu \epsilon \nu = \pi \delta \nu \nu$ belongs in sense to $\sigma \pi \sigma \nu \nu \delta \delta \sigma \alpha \nu \tau$, which here must have the sense 'to despatch hurriedly', which it has in 507.
- 95. γ ένοιτ' $\ddot{a}\nu = \delta$ ύναιτ' $\ddot{a}\nu \gamma$ ενέσθαι: this quasi-potential use of the optative is to be regarded as conditional in its origin; it denotes that the event would conceivably occur under conditions which are present to the speaker's mind. Comp. Hdt. V. 9, γ ένοιτο δ' $\ddot{a}\nu \pi \ddot{a}\nu$ έν τ $\dot{\omega}$ μ ακρ $\dot{\omega}$ χ ρ δ ν ω , 'anything may happen'.
- 100. 'Framing with thy tales deceitful shifts, pitiful though they be'. For this use of ὄμως cp. 307, and the similar use of Latin tamen, e.g. in Virg. Aen. III. 341, Ecqua tamen puero est amissae cura parentis? 'lost though she be'.
- 103. This line (a weak interpretation of 101-2) looks like an interpolation; $oi\kappa$ is out of place and should precede $\delta\iota\dot{\alpha}$ $\tau\epsilon\lambda ovs$. Stobaeus quoting lines 101-6 omits this verse.
- 104. 'For all things retire and give place one to another'. For the sentiment compare Ajax 669—675. δίχα, an adverb, particularizes the meaning of ἀπό: so Antig. 164, ἐκ πάντων δίχα.
- 107. $\mu\ell\lambda\alpha\theta\rho\alpha$, $\delta\ell\mu\nu\iota\alpha$ are accusatives after $\ell\sigma\tau\lambda\lambda\eta\nu$, which here is perfect in meaning. 'I am come to the vaulted hall and to the couch of the aged', i.e. of the aged Amphitryon: Eur. is peculiarly fond of attaching an adjective with the general significance of 'aged' to a substantive with which it does not properly agree: compare 450, $\gamma\rho\alpha\iota\alpha$ δ $\sigma\sigma\omega\nu$ $\pi\eta\gamma\dot{\alpha}$ s, and 1209 $\pi\circ\lambda\iota\partial\nu$ δ $\alpha\kappa\rho\nu$ υον, 'an old man's tears'.
 - 110. πολιός όρνις, i.q. κύκνος γέρων, 692.
- 111. ἔπεα μόνον, 'a voice and nothing more'; cp. 229 οὐδὲν ὅντα πλὴν γλώσσης ψόφον.
- 113. $\tau\rho o\mu\epsilon\rho\dot{a}$ and $\pi\rho\dot{o}\theta\nu\mu a$ are probably used adverbially; for examples see 61, note.
 - 114. τέκεα πατρὸς ἀπάτορα. In translating opposite words thus placed in juxtaposition it is important to bear in mind that the prominent idea which they express is that of misfortune; here, for example, $\delta\pi\delta\tau\rho\rho\alpha$ is not 'fatherless', but 'hapless in your father' or simply 'hapless'; so II33 $\delta\pi\delta\delta\epsilon\mu\rho\nu$ $\pi\delta\delta\epsilon\mu\rho\nu$, 'a cruel war'. $\pi\alpha\tau\rho\delta$ s is here, as in 31, unnecessary to the sense, and its insertion is due to the juxtaposition of $\delta\pi\delta\tau\rho\rho\alpha$.

- 116. 'Atôa δόμοις. Notice the omission of $\epsilon \nu$, rare except in choric passages. 'Atôa is the Doric genitive of 'Atôns (Attic "Atôns); for the form compare $\epsilon \kappa \gamma \epsilon \nu \epsilon \tau a$, Bacch. 1155, and the similar contraction of the gen. plur. $-\hat{a}\nu$ for $-\hat{a}\omega\nu$, as $\hat{a}\gamma\rho\omega\sigma\tau\hat{a}\nu$ in 377.
- 118. 'Let not your foot untimely flag, nor your limbs with heaviness ($\beta a \rho \dot{\nu}$ proleptic), even as a yoke-bearing colt is wearied as it drags a heavy wheeled chariot up a rocky hill'. There seems little doubt that this is the general meaning of this very corrupt passage, but the reading adopted in the text (that of Nauck) differs considerably from that of MSS. The use of $\pi \rho \dot{\nu}$ s to indicate motion $u\dot{\rho}$ an incline is somewhat unusual; it has its nearest parallel in $\pi \rho \dot{\nu}$ s $\dot{\rho} \dot{\nu}$ o, against stream.
- 125. 'Let each veteran escort his fellow, with whom his arms were once united in companionship in the battles of their youth, when they were young together'. The war with the Taphii is perhaps referred to.
- 130. πατρός—προσφερεῖς, brachylogy for προσφερεῖς τῶν τοῦ πατρός: Iliad, XVII. 51, κόμαι Χαρίτεσσιν ὁμοῖαι.
- 133. This line is parenthetic, and οὐδ' ἀποίχεται χάριs is to be connected with ἴδετε...αὐγαί.—λέλοιπεν ἐκ τέκνων, Pflugk remarks, is an unusual construction, but is established by good authority, e.g. Soph. Electra, 513, οὔ τί πω ἔλιπεν ἐκ τοῦδ' οἴκου πολύπονος αἰκία, Thuc. V. 4, ἀπολιπόντες ἐκ τῶν Συρακουσῶν.
- 138. ἀλλὰ γάρ, commonly used when the subject is abruptly changed, or a new character appears on the stage; γάρ belongs in reality to a sentence which is here suppressed, but supplied in Phoen. 1307, ἀλλὰ γὰρ Κρέοντα λεύσσω...παύσω τοὺς παρεστῶτας γόους. Cp. 442.
- 141. $\epsilon l \chi \rho \dot{\eta} \dot{\mu} ... \chi \rho \dot{\eta} \delta \dot{\epsilon}$. Lycus apologises for the abruptness of his question, but at the same time implies that in doing so he defers rather to Greek habits of politeness than to any regard for the feelings of those addressed. So Trach. 809, $\epsilon l \theta \dot{\epsilon} \mu \iota s \delta' \dot{\epsilon} \pi \epsilon \dot{\nu} \chi o \mu \alpha \iota$, $|\theta \dot{\epsilon} \mu \iota s \delta', \dot{\epsilon} \pi \epsilon l ...$
 - 145. The more usual order would be τον παρ "Αιδη κείμενον πατέρα: for a similar trajection see 735. It is not rare even in prose, e.g. Thuc. VII. 14, αὶ νῦν οἴσαι πόλεις ξύμμαχοι.

- 147. $\pi \acute{e}\nu \theta os$ a $\acute{e}\rho \epsilon \sigma \theta a\iota$ means simply 'to take sorrow upon oneself', and differs little from $\pi \epsilon \nu \theta \epsilon \hat{\iota}\nu$; it must be distinguished from $\pi \acute{e}\nu \theta os$ a $\acute{e}\rho \epsilon \iota\nu$, 'to exaggerate grief'.
- 149. The MSS. here read ως σύγγαμός σοι Ζεύς τέκοι νέον. Nauck regards the verse as corrupt and marks a lacuna after Zeis. Pflugk reads Ζεὐs ἐκοινώνει λέχους. Dindorf and Paley allow the MSS. to be correct as far as they go, and complete the verse by adding $\theta \epsilon \delta \nu$: in support of this they quote aptly enough Bacch. 467, Zeùs δ' ἔστ' ἐκεῖ τις δς νέους τίκτει θεούς. An objection to which their reading is open is the unnecessary and meaningless change of mood, τέκοι--ἐκλήθης. We are convinced that the true explanation of the lacuna is to be found by comparing this line with one closely parallel to it in this play, viz. 340. There, as here, Amphitryon says he is called the ομόγαμος of Zeus; there, as here, the MSS, fail where he apparently speaks of Zeus as the joint-parent of Heracles. 340 reads in the MSS. μάτην δὲ παιδός τοι νεών ἐκλήζομεν. Of the many emendations of this line which have been proposed one only can claim to give the sense required without departing very widely from the letters of the MSS., and it is surprising that it has not hitherto been adopted. It is Scaliger's παιδὸς κοινεῶν' ἐκλήζομεν, 'I styled you joint-father of my son', which requires the change of but a single letter. In 149 almost the same letters occur, τεΚΟΙ ΝΕΟΝ: if we read τέκνου τε κοινέων it is easy to see that the copyist's mistake arose from the repetition of the letters TEK. The very rareness of the word κοινέων (= κοινωνός) was also a pitfall to him. L. and S. recognize it only in the form κοινών used by Xenophon, which is linked to κοινέων by Hesiod's ξυνήων (Theog. 595, 601). Compare λυμέων.
- 151. 'Tell me what is this grand exploit which your husband has achieved', i.e. that exploit on which you base his claims to be considered ἄριστος. τί τὸ σεμνὸν =τί ἐστι τὸ σεμνὸν ὁ; Cp. Βαςςh. 492, τί με τὸ δεινὸν ἐργάσει; Cobet's proposed alteration τί δῆτα σεμνὸν is therefore quite needless. See Shilleto on Fals. Leg. § 130.
- 153. He says he strangled the lion with his hands, but really he only snared it.
- 155. ξξαγωνίζεσθε, 'Is it on these achievements that you rest your contention?' Comp. 1255, ώs ἀμιλληθῶ λόγοις.
- 157. The antecedent to ős is to be supplied from the adjective Hranhelovs in the preceding line; cp. Trach. 259, έρχεται πόλιν | τὴν

Εὐρυτείαν τόνδε γὰρ (i. e. τὸν Εὔρυτον) μεταίτιον | ἔφασκεν εἶναι. ἔσχε δόξαν εὐψυχίας = ἔδοξεν εἶναι εὕψυχος. Amphitryon refers to this taunt in 184, δν σὸ φὴς εἶναι δοκεῖν.

- 161. κάκιστον ὅπλον. The Greeks held archers, as opposed to hoplites, in contempt, regarding the bow as essentially a barbarian weapon. Thus in the Persae of Aeschylus (86, 148, 241) the spear and shield-bearing Greeks (δουρίκλυτοι ἄνδρες, δορυκράνου λόγχης Ισχύς) are frequently contrasted with the Persian archers (τοξόδαμνος "Αρης, τόξου ῥῦμα). In a similar manner in the Ajax (1120 foll.) Menelaus and Teucer dispute the relative advantages of ἀσπίς and τόξον.—τŷ φυγŷ, 'the flight', which was certain to ensue.
 - 162. $d\nu\delta\rho\delta s$ is emphatic by position.
- 163. '(But he is brave) who holds his ground and watches with unflinching gaze the swift-ploughing spear, standing firm in the rank'. For ἄλοξ applied to a 'gash', cp. Aesch. Cho. 25, δνυχος άλοκι νεοτόμφ, and Rhesus 796, βαθεῖαν ἄλοκα τραύματος.
- 165. τούμον, 'my conduct'. ἔχει, 'implies', as in Soph. El. 351, ού ταῦτα πρὸς κακοῖσι δειλίαν ἔχει;—ἀναίδειαν = cruelty, as αἰδώς = mercy, e.g. in 301.
 - 166. οΐδα κατακτανών, 'I have killed and I know it'.
- 168. 'So I do not wish to have them left when they are grown up to take vengeance on me, and requite me for my deeds'. δίκην is in apposition, not with $\tau\iota\mu\omega\rho\rho\dot{\nu}$ s, but with the sentence, like ἀμοιβάs in 226; its adverbial use in the sense of ritu is to be similarly explained. Instead of translating $\lambda\iota\pi\acute{e}\sigma\theta\iota\iota\iota$ as an indirect middle it would be possible to regard it as a reflexive middle, or neuter, 'to leave oneself', i.e. 'to remain', which is its sense in Homer, e.g. Od. III. 196, $\dot{\omega}$ s $\dot{\omega}\gamma\alpha\theta\dot{\partial}\nu$ καὶ $\pi\alpha\dot{\omega}\delta\alpha$ καταφθιμένοιο $\lambda\iota\pi\acute{e}\sigma\theta\iota\iota$ | $\dot{\omega}\nu\dot{\delta}\rho\acute{o}s$. For $\tau\rho\alpha\phi\acute{e}\nu\tau\omega\nu$ $\tau\dot{\omega}\nu\dot{\delta}e$ an accusative in agreement with $\tau\iota\mu\omega\rho\rho\dot{\nu}s$ would be the more natural and usual construction. For the sentiment compare Andr. 520.
- 170. Let Zeus defend his son $in\ deed$; I will answer for him λόγοισι.
- 174. We are indebted to Mr Sandys for the following explanation of these lines. 'There is a reference here to the law of libel, κακηγορία. See especially Lysias, Or. 10, κατὰ Θεομνήστου. The speech is written for a κακηγορίαs δίκη, and we learn from it that among the ἀπόρρητα (or ἄρρητα) was the imputation of cowardice; e.g. to call a man $\dot{\rho}$ ίψασπις would render one liable to a δίκη κακηγορίαs. (Similarly the epithets ἀνδροφόνος, μητραλοίας, πατραλοίας.) That the allusion here is a legal one is indicated by the word μάρτυσιν in the next line. Cp. Isocr.

Or. 20, § 3, καὶ περὶ τῆς κακηγορίας νόμον ἔθεσαν ὅς κελεύει τοὺς λέγοντάς τι τῶν ἀπορρήτων πεντακοσιας δραχμὰς ὀφείλειν'.

- 177. $\dot{\eta}\rho\dot{\rho}\mu\eta\nu$, 'I ask', a rist for present, $\dot{\epsilon}\rho\omega\tau\hat{\omega}$. The construction is continued in 183. 'I ask the evidence of the thunderbolt &c., do you appeal to that of the Centaurs, as to whom they would single out as bravest'.
- 178. 'In which he rode against the giants and planted his winged shafts in their hearts'. $\beta\alpha\ell\nu\epsilon\nu$, $\ell\lambda\theta\epsilon\hat{\nu}$ &c. when indicating hostile advance take a dative after them, as in P.V. 358, $d\lambda\lambda'$ $\mathring{\eta}\lambda\theta\epsilon\nu$ $a\mathring{\nu}r\mathring{\psi}$ $Z\eta\nu\delta$ s $\mathring{\alpha}\gamma\rho\nu\pi\nu\sigma\nu$ $\beta\ell\lambda\sigma$ s. This rendering appears to us better than to take $\Gamma\ell\gamma\alpha\sigma\iota...\pi\lambda\epsilon\nu\rho\sigma\hat{\nu}$ s as a double dative of the whole and part, 'having planted in the giants, in their hearts'.
- 182. Pholoe, a mountain in Arcadia where Heracles fought with the Centaurs.
- 184. τ (ν' ἀνδρ΄...η οὐ, 'what man but my son?' τ (ν' η = τ (ν' η = τ (ν' η, and οὐ is a superfluous repetition of the negative idea contained in the disjunctive η, examples of which are more common after μάλλον η, e.g. Hdt. IV. II8, ηκει γὰρ ὁ Πέρσης οὐδέν τι μάλλον ἐπ' ἡμέας η οὐ καὶ ἐπ' ὑμέας. Some editors take η in its interrogative use, 'Would they not single out my son?' but this appears dramatically less effective.
- 185. Dirphys, a mountain in Euboea, the inhabitants of which island are called by Homer " $A\beta\alpha\nu\tau\epsilon$ s.— $\dot{\epsilon}\rho\omega\tau\hat{\omega}\nu$ is a nominativus pendens; the sentence ought regularly to be continued $o\dot{\nu}\kappa$ $\dot{a}\nu$ $\dot{\epsilon}\pi\alpha\iota\nu\epsilon\theta\epsilon\iota\eta$ s $\dot{\nu}\pi'$ $a\dot{\nu}\tau\hat{\eta}$ s.
 - 189. μέμφει, 'you disparage'.
- 191. 'He perishes by the fault of his comrades if (μή) they be not brave men'. $\tau ο i σι$ σι ντ. is here a dative of the means or instrument, for which cp. 1380, note; it = διὰ τοὺς συνταχθέντας μὴ ὄντας ἀγαθούς. δειλία τŷ τῶν πέλας repeats the meaning in other words.
 - 193. σώματι, dativus commodi, 'to ward off from his body'.
 - 196. Note the sing. ἀφείς after ὅσοι. ἄλλοις, 'with other arrows'.
- 199. τυφλοῖς ὁρῶντας, 'unseen to their vision'. ὁρῶντας is scarcely significant by itself, but gives a formal antithesis.

- 205. των καθ. πέρι, 'about the subject in hand'.
- 213. εὶ δ' οὖν θέλεις, 'but if you do wish'. δ' οὖν, ceterum, reverts to the question of the expediency of slaying the children, which was interrupted at 209, ἀλλὰ τοῦθ' ὅμως, κ.τ.λ. αὐτὸς, 'unmolested by us'; so Ar. Ach. 504, αὐτοὶ γάρ ἐσμεν...κοὅπω ξένοι πάρεισι.
- 220. Μινύαισι is to be pronounced as a trisyllable, or we must allow a metrical latitude where proper names are in question. The legend referred to was to the effect that Erginus, King of Orchomenus, yearly exacted a tribute of 100 oxen from the Thebans, who had slain his father, Clymenus; Heracles defeated and killed Erginus, and compelled the Minyae to pay an annual tribute twice as great as that which they had formerly exacted.
 - 221. ἐλεύθερον, 'look with free glance'.
- 226. ἀμοιβάs and χάριν are accusatives in apposition with the sentence; compare the similar use of ἄποινα in Alc. 7, καί με θητεύειν πατηρ | θνητ $\hat{\varphi}$ παρ' ἀνδρί τῶνδ' ἄποιν', ἠνάγκασεν. Translate, 'a recompense for his purging land and sea, and a grateful return for his toils'.
 - 228. ἀρκεῖ, 'such aid nor Thebes nor Hellas renders'.
- 234. 'Beyond the bounds of Atlas', i.e. the pillars of Heracles, Gibraltar and Abyla, regarded as the limits of the earth in the West.
- 235. For ἄν Elmsley, followed by Nauck, reads νιν: but ὥστε φεύγειν ἄν stands for ὥστε βούλεσθαι φεύγειν. Comp. Thuc. II. 49, τὰ δὲ ἐντὸς οὕτως ἐκάετο ὥστε μήτε ἀν έχεσθαι... ἤδιστά τε ἄν εἰς ὕδωρ ψυχρὸν σφᾶς αὐτοὺς ῥίπτειν, 'so that they could not (as a fact) endure,...and would have liked to throw themselves into cold water', i.e. they would have done so had it been possible. The sentence is conditional, as is shown by Gorgias 464 D where the protasis is supplied: ὧστ' εἰ δέοι ἐν παισὶ διαγωνίζεσθαι πότερος ἐπαῖει περὶ τῶν χρηστῶν σιτίων καὶ πονηρῶν ὁ ἰατρὸς ἢ ὁ ὀψοποιός, λιμῷ ᾶν ἀποθανεῖν τὸν ἰατρόν.

- 236. ἀφορμάs, 'resources', 'funds' on which they can draw; commonly used in the sense of 'capital', 'banking stock'.
- 238. λέγε, i.e. κακῶς λέγε corresponding to δράσω κακῶς. 'You may defame me in speech of towering boastfulness, but for ill words I will return you ill deeds'. λόγοις is attracted to the case of the relative. τῶν λόγων, 'those words' mentioned in the last line. Compare 269, 310, 1263.
- 241. $\& \nu \omega \chi \theta \epsilon$ (= $\& \nu \omega \gamma \epsilon \tau \epsilon$), a form used by Homer, Od. XXII. 437, and in Rhesus 987; the sing. $\& \nu \omega \chi \theta \iota$ occurs in Homer, Aeschylus and Eur. Of this suffix - $\theta \epsilon$ in the 2nd plur. of the perf. act. imperative the only other certain example is $\& \gamma \rho \eta \gamma \rho \eta \theta \epsilon$ (Iliad, VII. 371). 'Buttmann was certainly right in saying that from the similarity of sound to that of the passive terminations ($\tau \epsilon \tau \nu \phi \theta \epsilon$, $\& \phi \theta \alpha \rho \theta \epsilon$ etc.), the τ sometimes passes into θ . The want of a vowel belonging to the stem misled the instinct of the language, which was used to such groups of letters only in the middle, into confusing them with the middle terminations. In the case of $\& \nu \omega \chi \theta \epsilon$ this view is confirmed by the 3rd sing. $\& \nu \omega \chi \theta \epsilon$ (active), & Iliad XI. 189'. Curtius, & The Greek & Verb, p. 384 Eng. trans. In Eur. $\& \nu \omega \chi \theta \epsilon$ is to be regarded as a conscious reproduction of an Epic form.
- 246. $\tau \dot{\alpha}$ νῦν $\tau \dot{\alpha} \delta \epsilon$, 'I rule here now': $\tau \dot{\alpha} \delta \epsilon$, literally, 'as regards what we see before us': so Tro. 99, οὐκέτι Τροία τάδε, 'here no more is Troy': Thuc. VI. 77, οὐκ Ἰωνες τάδε εἰσί, 'here are no Ionians'.
- 247. $\pi \rho \epsilon \sigma \beta \epsilon \iota s$ here and in Persae 840 = $\pi \rho \epsilon \sigma \beta \hat{v} \tau \alpha \iota$: generally it is used as the plural of $\pi \rho \epsilon \sigma \beta \epsilon \upsilon \tau \dot{\eta} s$, 'an envoy'.
- 248. MSS. have $\sigma \tau \epsilon \nu \delta \xi \epsilon \tau \epsilon$ and 1054 ald $\xi \epsilon \tau$: verbs in - $\xi \omega$ indicating sound usually have futures in - $\xi o \mu \omega \iota$, but in tragedy the active form is, though rarely, permitted, e.g. $\epsilon \kappa \beta \delta \xi \omega$, Aesch. Ag. 498, $\kappa \lambda \delta \gamma \xi \omega$, Persae, 947.
 - 251. $\gamma \epsilon \gamma \hat{\omega} \tau \epsilon s$ as in 1175 simply = $\delta \nu \tau \epsilon s$.
- 252. $\tau o \dot{\nu} s$. An archaic use of the article (strictly a demonstrative), as a relative. Some editors quite needlessly read $\lambda o \chi \epsilon \dot{\nu} \mu a \theta'$ o $\dot{\nu} s$. For the present $\sigma \pi \epsilon \dot{\nu} \rho \dot{\nu}$ with $\pi \sigma r \dot{\epsilon}$ cp. Bacch. 2, $\Delta \iota \dot{\nu} \rho \nu \sigma \sigma s$ $\dot{\nu} \nu \tau \dot{\nu} \kappa \tau \epsilon \iota \pi \sigma \theta'$ $\dot{\eta}$ Káð $\mu o \nu \kappa \dot{\nu} \rho \eta$, and see note on 7. According to the common version of the legend it was Cadmus who sowed the teeth, and the dragon was the offspring of Ares.
- 257. 'Who, though a mean interloper and no Cadmean, lords over true-born citizens'. $\tau \hat{\omega} \nu \ \dot{\epsilon} \tau \hat{\omega} \nu$ is our own correction of the MSS. reading $\tau \hat{\omega} \nu \ \nu \dot{\epsilon} \omega \nu$, which we do not hesitate to condemn as corrupt. $\tau \hat{\omega} \nu \ \nu \dot{\epsilon} \omega \nu$ must mean, not 'new-comers', but 'young men', and it is pointless to say that he is 'worst of the young men', or that he 'rules the young men'. The hardship of his rule is evidently that it is an alien rule, not that Lycus heads a faction of young men. On the other hand $\dot{\epsilon}\tau\hat{\omega}\nu$ affords just the contrast which $\ddot{\epsilon}\pi\eta\lambda\nu$ s requires, and at the same time as a rare word would be likely to puzzle an indifferent copyist; all the change required is that in $\tau\omega\nu\nu\epsilon\omega\nu$ τ and not ν should be repeated with a slight transposition. We find $\ddot{\epsilon}\tau\eta s$ contrasted with a ruler in Eur. fragm. 1003, $\pi\delta\lambda\epsilon\omega s$ $\mu\dot{\epsilon}\nu$ $\dot{\epsilon}\rho\chi\dot{\phi}$ $\phi\omega\tau l$ $\dot{\delta}'$ où $\dot{\kappa}$ $\ddot{\epsilon}\tau\eta$ $\pi\rho\dot{\epsilon}\pi\omega\nu$, and again in Aesch. Supp. 247 the Chorus asks the king of the Argives whether he is $\ddot{\epsilon}\tau\eta s$ or $\pi\delta\lambda\epsilon\omega s$ $\dot{\epsilon}\gamma\delta s$. The word $\ddot{\epsilon}\tau\eta s$ is known to occur only in one other passage in tragedy, viz. Aesch. fragm. 314.— $\kappa\dot{\epsilon}\kappa\omega\tau\sigma s$ is not to be taken with $\ddot{\epsilon}\pi\eta\lambda\nu s$, but is a parenthetic exclamation—'rules, the mean fellow! over citizens'. So $\dot{\delta}$ $\pi\alpha\gamma\kappa\dot{\alpha}\kappa\omega\tau\sigma s$ in 731.

260. ἀπέρρων, 'go (and a curse go with thee), to whence thou camest hither': so ἄπερρε in Aristophanes =abi in malam rem. Compare ὀνήμενος, similarly related to ὅνησο, in Homer, Od. II. 33, ἐσθλός μοι δοκεῖ εἶναι ὀνήμενος, 'he seemeth a true man, and blessing betide him'. Compare also 1290, ἀποφθαρήσεται.

262. 'Not so far is he hidden beneath the earth', as to make us forget his services to Thebes, 'for $(\epsilon \pi \epsilon l)$ for those services he gets no due reward'.

264. διολέσας ἔχεις, in this common construction we see an approach to the English use of the auxiliary verb, though the literal meaning, 'you possess the land which you have destroyed', is not altogether lost. Comp. Bacch. 53, είδος θνητὸν ἀλλάξας ἔχω, 'I have assumed and wear a mortal shape'.

266. 'And yet am I officious (πολυπράγμων) if I help my friends when they are dead and most need friends?' ἔπειτα, 'after that,' 'nevertheless': Alc. 822, ἔπειτα δῆτά μ' ἐξενίζετε; 'in spite of that (the death of Alcestis), were you entertaining me?' See Shilleto on Falsa Leg. § 28, crit. note.

269. $\tau \delta \nu \pi \delta \theta \omega \nu$, 'that desire', alluded to in $\pi \sigma \theta \epsilon \hat{\imath} s$. διώλεσαs, you have lost the ability to realize your wish.

272. $\chi \alpha l \rho \epsilon \iota \nu$ differs from $\chi \alpha l \rho \epsilon \iota \nu$ with a simple dat. ('rejoice at') in that it means 'to rejoice in the possession of a thing'. So Aesch. Eum. 996, $\chi \alpha l \rho \epsilon \tau'$ èv al $\sigma \iota \tau \lambda \iota \nu$ where $\tau \iota \nu$ the blessing of wealth'.

274. 'For if it were not distraught, it would never have got you for its master'.

275. $\alpha l \nu \hat{\omega}$, like $\epsilon \pi \alpha \iota \nu \hat{\omega}$, is used in politely declining services; cp. P. V. 340, $\tau \hat{\alpha}$ $\mu \epsilon \nu$ σ' $\epsilon \pi \alpha \iota \nu \hat{\omega}$... $\tilde{\alpha} \tau \alpha \rho$ $\mu \eta \delta \hat{\epsilon} \nu$ $\pi \delta \nu \epsilon \iota$.

280. ϕ ιλῶ, 'how should I not love?' ϕ ιλῶ is indic. as is shown by Soph. El. 923, πῶς δ' οὐκ ἐγὼ κάτοιδ' ἄ γ' εἶδον έμφανῶς;

- 281. μοχθεῖν with acc. 'to toil for'; so Phoen. 1549, παραβάκτροις \hat{a} πόδα σὸν τυφλόπουν θεραπεύμασιν αἰὲν ἐμόχθει.
- 282. $\tau\hat{\varphi}$ ἀν. $\tau\rho\delta\pi\psi$ apparently= $\tau\hat{\psi}$ ἀναγκαί ψ simply, 'necessity'; Pflugk quotes έκουσί ψ τρόπ ψ , 'willingly', ποιητ $\hat{\psi}$ τρόπ ψ , 'treacherously', &c.; but these instances are scarcely apt, and Paley is right in suspecting corruption; $\beta\rho\sigma\tau\hat{\psi}$ would give a good sense, while owing to $\beta\rho\sigma\tau\hat{\psi}$ in the next line it would be especially liable to alteration by an over-ingenious copyist; 'what mortal must needs submit to it is idle for mortal to fight against'.
- 289. δειλίας ὕπο, 'with cowardice'; ὑπό marks attendant circumstances, as $Hi\rho\rho$. 1300, ὡς ὑπ' εὐκλείας θάνη, Ion, 1333, καθαρὸς Αθήνας ἔλθ' ὑπ' οἰωνῶν καλῶν, 'attended by good omens'. Compare ὑπὸ λύρας, σάλπιγγος &c. 'to the sound of'.
- 290. 'And my glorious husband needs not to asseverate that he would be unwilling to save these children to their dishonour; for men gently born are distressed at disgraces, for their children's sake', who would inherit from their parents the name of cowards. Verbal adjectives in - τ 0s usually have a passive sense; if $\dot{a}\mu\alpha\rho\tau$. be passive it comes from $\mu\alpha\rho\tau\dot{\nu}\rho\epsilon\sigma\theta\alpha\iota$, 'to call to witness'; but as e.g. $\ddot{a}\kappa\lambda\alpha\nu\sigma\tau$ 0s means 'not weeping' as well as 'unwept', it is possible that $\dot{a}\mu\alpha\rho\tau$. is here active, and to be connected with $\mu\alpha\rho\tau\nu\rho\epsilon\dot{\nu}\nu$ (intrans.) 'to bear witness'. On the analogy of $\ddot{\nu}\pi\sigma\tau\tau$ 0s (Hec. 1135), 'suspecting', $\pi\iota\sigma\tau$ 0s (P. V. 917), 'trusting', we should then translate $\dot{a}\mu\alpha\rho\tau$. 'does not testify', i.e. he is not here to do so.
- 297. $\kappa a l \tau l s$ and $\kappa a l \tau l s$ addiffer from $\tau l s$ $\kappa a l$, $\tau l s$ $\kappa a l$ (which are simply interrogative) in that they impart a tone of surprise or incredulity to the question; 'Why, who ever...'
 - 298. ώς, i.e. νομίζεις ώς.
- 299. $\sigma \kappa \alpha i \delta \nu = \sigma \kappa \alpha i \delta \nu \ \delta \nu \tau \alpha$, i.e. $\sigma \kappa \alpha i \delta \nu$ is in apposition to rather than in agreement with $\delta \nu \delta \rho' \ \epsilon \chi \theta \rho \delta \nu$.
- 301. 'For in their case you will more easily obtain mercy by making friendly overtures'.
 - 303. $\phi \nu \gamma \dot{\alpha} s$ (for $\phi \nu \gamma \dot{\gamma} \nu$) is attracted to the number of $\tau \dot{\epsilon} \kappa \nu \omega \nu$.
- 304. $\pi\epsilon\rho\iota\beta\alpha\lambda\epsilon\hat{\imath}\nu$, scil. $a\delta\tau$ oîs, 'to invest them with safety to which is attached the misery of poverty'; $\sigma\acute{\nu}\nu$ marks the accompanying circumstances. For the metaphor contained in $\pi\epsilon\rho\iota\beta\alpha\lambda\epsilon\hat{\imath}\nu$ compare Iliad, XVII. 742, $\mu\acute{\epsilon}\nu$ os $\grave{\alpha}\mu\dot{\phi}\iota\beta\alpha\lambda\acute{\nu}\tau\dot{\epsilon}s$: so commonly $\pi\epsilon\rho\iota\tau\iota\theta\acute{\epsilon}\nu\alpha\iota$.
- 305. 'For there is a saying that a host keeps his gracious looks for his friend in banishment only for a single day'.
 - 307. ὅμως, 'all the same', avoid it as you will. Cp. 100.

- 309. $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa\mu\omega\chi\theta\epsilon\hat{\iota}$ 'struggles to escape the destiny sent by the gods'. The word is used in a different sense in 22; here it $=\dot{\epsilon}\kappa\pi\omega\nu\epsilon\hat{\iota}\nu$ in 581. In the plural $\tau\dot{\nu}\chi\alpha\iota$ usually has a bad sense 'mischances'.
- 310. $\dot{\eta}$ προθυμία, 'that sanguine hope is folly': πρόθυμός $\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\iota$ is equivalent to προθυμίαν έχει.
- 311. This feeble line looks like the 'tag' of a copyist, too dull to appreciate the epigrammatic abruptness with which Megara's speech ends in the preceding line.—For ovo $\delta \epsilon is$ $\mu \dot{\eta}$ with fut. indic. see Goodwin, Moods and Tenses § 89, 1.
- 316. οὖτοι...οὐδέ. ''οὐκ...οὐδέ are properly used where the second clause is emphasized as stronger than the first, e.g. Heracl. 64, οὔτοι βί α γέ μ οὐδὲ τούσδ' ἄξεις λαβών, 'you shall not take me—no, nor these either'. But where the two clauses are strictly on a par as regards emphasis οὐ (οὔτοι)...οὖτε is sometimes found". Prof. Jebb on Ajax, 428.
- 325. Paley is right in keeping ϵl $\pi \rho \delta \theta \nu \mu o s$ ϵl , which is unnecessarily changed by Nauck and Dindorf to $\hat{\eta}$ $\pi \rho \delta \theta \nu \mu o s$ ϵl , not observing that $\tau \tilde{a} \lambda \lambda a$ is euphemistic for $\tau \delta \nu$ $\phi \delta \nu o \nu$, as it is again in 726 and 1125.
- 328. διπλά after ἀμφοῖν must mean not a double but a simultaneous favour; such is apparently the sense of διπλοῦν in Soph. Phil. 1370, χοὕτω διπλῆν μὲν ἐξ ἐμοῦ κτήσει χάριν | διπλῆν δὲ πατρόν, 'alike (i.e. by a single act) win my father's gratitude and mine'. So too in line 950 διπλοῦν δ' ὁπαδοῖν ἦν γέλων φόβον θ' ὁμοῦ, 'simultaneous laughter and dread'. No doubt in the present instance as in the last quoted example διπλά owes its place to the purely verbal antithesis with εἶν, ὁμοῦ: εἶν and διπλά are in fact in sense inseparable. For their attraction for one another compare Soph. Ant. 14, μιξ θανόντων ἡμέρς διπλ \hat{y} χερί, and 937 of this play.
- 329. κόσμον here no doubt means the clothing, ornaments and unguents used in laying out a corpse for the funeral; particularly it refers to the chaplet placed on the head of the dead person $(\pi \epsilon \rho \iota \beta o \lambda ds \kappa \delta \mu \eta s, 562)$. In the present case they are worn by living persons who know their end to be at hand, as in the similar case of Alcestis, $\xi \xi \epsilon \lambda o \vartheta \sigma a \kappa \epsilon \delta \rho \iota \nu \omega \nu \delta \delta \mu \omega \nu \mid \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \theta \dot{\eta} \tau a \kappa \delta \sigma \mu o \nu \tau' \dot{\epsilon} \dot{\nu} \pi \rho \epsilon \pi \dot{\omega} s \dot{\eta} \sigma \kappa \dot{\eta} \sigma a \tau o (Alc. 160)$.
- 331. 'At all events this': for άλλά...γε compare Soph. O. C. 1276, πειράσατ' άλλ' ὑμεῖς γε, 'do you at least try'.
- 337. της οὐσίας, 'the substance' i.e. the ownership of the house and all that it contains, opposed to ὅνομα, your nominal home.
 - 340. For the reading see note on 149.

- 341. ἢσθ' ἄρα, 'thou wast not, it seems, so good a friend as I thought thee'. For the idiom οὐκ ἄρα followed by a past tense (imperfect, aorist or pluperfect) see Shilleto's notes on Thuc. 1. 69 and Fals. Leg. § 177. For ἤσσων φίλος (compare μέγας φίλος, 'a powerful friend', Medea, 549) editors generally though needlessly have adopted ἦσσον φίλος. Amphitryon has spoken of gaining Zeus as his ὁμόγαμος, exactly as one speaks of gaining a friend, κτᾶσθαι φίλον. After events, says he, show that you are not the all-powerful friend which your conduct then should have implied.
- 347. 'Thou art a stupid kind of god' (referring to οὐκ ἐπίστασαι), 'or thy nature is unjust'. τις apologizes for the personal directness of ἀμαθὴς εἶ θεός, by making the taunt general. Compare Theocr. XVIII. 10, ἡ ῥά τις ἐσσὶ λίαν βαρυγούνατος, 'you must be a stiff-kneed sort of fellow'. So τις is used (like quidam by Cicero), to tone down a metaphor which is conceived to be incorrect or over bold, as in 671, είλισσόμενός τις αἰών, 'Time, like some rolling stream'.—θεός must be pronounced as a monosyllable, as it is in Or. 399, δεινὴ γὰρ ἡ θεός, ἀλλ' ὅμως ἰάσιμος.
- 348. The Chorus sing of the twelve Labours of Heracles, culminating in his last and, as they deem it, fatal quest of bringing Cerberus from Hades. The recital of his triumphs is but the prelude to the dirge with which their chant ends (v. 426 foll.), even as Phoebus closes his glad strains with the sad Linus song. $\dot{\epsilon}\pi'$ $\dot{\epsilon}\dot{\nu}\tau\nu\chi\dot{\epsilon}\hat{\iota}$ $\mu o\lambda\pi\hat{q}$, 'after a song of victory'. Probably this ode is constructed on the model of the Pindaric $\theta p\hat{\eta}\nu\sigma$, which began by enumerating the triumphs and successes of the departed.
- 353. εἴπω is a deliberative subjunctive, the mood being quite independent of εἴτε. Compare Thuc. VII. I, ἐβουλεύοντο εἴτε διακινδυνεύσωσιν ἐσπλεῦσαι εἴτε κατὰ γῆν ἔλθωσι.
- 357. 'The praise of noble deeds is a glorious tribute to the dead'. $d\rho\epsilon\tau\dot{\eta}$ strictly 'a good deed' here stands for the recital of it, and practically = $\delta\dot{\phi}\xi a$. Comp. Soph. Phil. 1420, $d\theta\dot{\alpha}\nu\alpha\tau o\nu$ $\dot{\alpha}\rho\epsilon\tau\dot{\eta}\nu$ $\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\chi o\nu$, 'I won undying fame', and so Pindar often uses it. The plural $\dot{\alpha}\rho\epsilon\tau al$ is not merely a poetical variation for the sing.; the plurals of abstract nouns in Greek (prose as well as verse) are commonly used to express repeated manifestations or varieties of a quality; here $\dot{\alpha}\rho\epsilon\tau al$ =the praise won on different occasions by various $\pi\dot{\phi}\nu o\iota$.
- 361. 'And he had his fair head covered with the tawny lion's grim gaping fangs, and hung its skin on his back', i.e. Heracles' face appeared between the lion's jaws, while its skin drooped from his head down his back. For έπινωτίζειν 'to lay on the back', Pflugk well compares a passage from the Pastoralia of Longus (I. 9), λύκου μεγάλου δέρμα λαβών περιέτεινε τῷ σώματι ποδῆρες κατανωτισάμενος, and Rhesus, 208, λύκειον ἀμφὶ νῶτα θήσομαι δορὰν | καὶ σχῆμα θηρὸς ἀμφ' ἐμῷ θήσω κάρα.

- 368. ξύνοιδε, absolutely, 'is witness thereto'; so in Aeschines Adv. Ctes. § 57 ἐὰν δύνωμαι ἀπομνημονεῦσαι ἄ σοι σύνοιδα, 'the evidence I have against you'.—The scene of the fight with the Centaurs is in 182 laid at Pholoe in Arcadia. Perhaps here Euripides is thinking of Homer's story of the battle between the Centaurs and Lapithae in Thessaly (Iliad, 1. 267).
 - 369. $\tilde{a}\kappa a\rho\pi o$, i.e. wasted by the Centaurs.
- 371. Homole, a mountain near the Peneus. ἔναυλοι, 'haunts', i.e. shepherds' châlets or sleeping-places in the mountains, an Epic word.
- 372. $\pi ε i κ a \sigma ι$, the legend represents the Centaurs as armed with pines. Observe the use of the dative of instrument with $\pi \lambda \eta \rho o \hat{\nu} r \tau \epsilon s$ (=arming) instead of the more usual genitive.
- 378. θηροφόνον θεὰν Οἰνωᾶτιν, Artemis, who had a famous shrine at Oenoë in Argolis.—ἀγάλλει, i.e. he made it an ἄγαλμα to her; the stag being sacred to Artemis Heracles was obliged to appease her anger for killing it.
- 383. ἀχάλινα, probably an adverb, 'ravenously'. ἐθόαζον, they hurriedly despatched, devoured greedily. Comp. Bacchae, 65, θοάζω Βρομίφ πόνον ἡδύν, 'perform a task with wild gestures'.
- 385. 'Feeding unnaturally on cheer of human flesh'. Comp. Bacch. 139, αἷμα τραγοκτόνον, ὼμοφάγον χάριν, 'the blood of slaughtered goats, the welcome feast of raw flesh'.
- 386. The epithet ἀργυρορρύταν is probably derived from the rich mines of silver and gold existing in Thrace.
 - 389. τὰν...ἀκτάν, supply περῶν.
- 390. The Anaurus flows into the sinus Pagasaeus, near Mount Pelion, not into the Malian gulf (as Paley who reads $M\eta\lambda\iota\acute{a}\delta$). Amphanaea, the region in the neighbourhood of Amphanae, a town near Pagasae. According to the legend Cycnus was a robber and son of Ares who challenged Heracles to single combat. The story is the subject of the 'Shield of Heracles'.
- 398. MSS. δs ἄπλατον, but a long syllable is required in place of δs. Bergk suggested ζάπλουτον.
- 400. On the suppression of piracy by Heracles, πόντια καθάρματα, see note on 20. Probably we have here the mythical presentment of the fact that the Phoenicians first established a police of the sea, the worship of Heracles being a peculiarly Phoenician cult.

- 402. ἐρετμοῖs is an epexegetic dative: 'made calm for men to row'. Euripides clearly has in mind Pindar's language on the subject of Heracles, ναυτιλίαισι πορθμὸν ἀμερώσαις (Isthm. III. 75).
 - 406. $\kappa \alpha \tau \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \chi \epsilon$, he controlled, restrained, i.e. prevented from falling.
- 410. We must not suppose that the adjective Εδξεινον is arbitrarily transferred from the substantive to which in sense it belongs, but rather that οίδμα λίμνας, as conveying a single idea, is regarded as a single compound word, 'sea-surge'. See note on 468.
- 411. τίν' οὐκ, i.e. ἄπαντα, as in Dem. de Cor. § 48, εἶτ' ἐλαυνομένων καὶ ὑβριζομένων καὶ τί κακὸν εὐχὶ πασχόντων πᾶσα ἡ οἰκουμένη μεστὴ γέγονε προδοτών.
- 414. MSS. read $\pi \epsilon \pi \lambda \omega \nu \chi \rho \nu \sigma \epsilon \delta \sigma \tau \sigma \lambda \sigma \nu \phi \delta \rho \sigma s$ which beyond question is corrupt; the reading of the text is Nauck's suggestion, though he has not adopted it in his text.
- 415. 'A fatal quest of a girdle'; fatal because it led to the destruction of Hippolyte and the whole race of Amazons.
- 417. σώζετ for σώζεται is a rare elision; hence Pflugk and other editors prefer σώζεται Μυκήναις.
- 420. κύνα, compare 1274. κύων is applied by the poets in a transferred sense to many different animals, always however with an epithet to limit its application; e.g. the eagle, P. V. 1021, Δ ιδς πτηνὸς κύων, the griffins ibid. 803, Zηνὸς ἀκραγεῖς κύνες.
 - 421. $\dot{\epsilon}\xi\epsilon\pi\dot{\nu}\rho\omega\sigma\epsilon\nu$, he seared the neck as he cut off each head.
- 424. $\xi\kappa\tau\alpha$, this syncopated 2nd aor. is strictly Homeric; it is retained by the Aldine in Med. 1398 and is used once by Soph. (Trach. 38).— $\beta\sigma\tau\eta\rho\alpha$, i.e. Geryon, of Erythia, a small island on which Gades was built. Heracles put the hydra's blood on the arrows with which he shot Geryon.
- 425. Connect ἄλλων τε with τε in the next line; compare I275 μυρίων τ' ἄλλων πόνων | διῆλθον ἀγέλας κὰς νεκροὺς ἀφικόμην. As in the case of ἄλλως πε καὶ the attention is specially drawn to the words introduced by καὶ (here the second τε). ἄλλων does not mean 'other than those I have already mentioned'.—δρόμων ἀγάλματα is a very peculiar and unusual way of putting 'courses which confer distinction': it looks like a reminiscence of Pindar's language inaccurately applied, e.g. Nem. VIII. 26 δισσῶν σταδίων Νεμεαῖον ἄγαλμα where ἄγαλμα means 'the ode in celebration of a Nemean victory'.
 - 432. 'And the returnless life's journey (journey from life) of thy children, godless and unjust, the bark of Charon awaits', i.e. waits to carry them on the journey to Hades on which the godless and unjust Lycus is sending them.

- 444. τοῦ μεγάλου δήποτε, 'Heracles once styled ''the great''. δήποτε is often so joined with a mixture of pathos and irony to an epithet which has become unreal by altered circumstances; Tro. 506, ἄγετε τὸν ἀβρὸν δήποτ' ἐν Τροία πόδα, the 'delicate foot' (i.e. so then esteemed), Supp. 1131, ἀντὶ σωμάτων εὐδοκίμων δήποτ' ἐν Μυκήναις, 'persons once styled ''εὐδοκιμοι'''. δήποτε τὸ πρὶν $= \pi \rho$ ιν ποτε δὴ.
- 445. ὑποσειραίους is a conjecture for MSS. ὑπὸ σειραίοις, which is unintelligible; the dative ποσίν is dependent on ὑποσειραίους: 'dragging her children in a string at her feet'. Megara comes on the stage with her children on either side of her clinging to her robes; this suggests a comparison, here and again in 454, with the σειραΐοι, or trace-horses, which were harnessed to the τέθριππου on either side of the ζύγιοι ἵπποι.
- 452. This line, weak in sense and faulty as to Greek, is an interpolator's explanation of the preceding; it seems not unlikely that it may be an expansion of a gloss $\hat{\eta}$ $\phi ov \epsilon \dot{v} s$ upon the somewhat rare word $\sigma \phi a \gamma \epsilon \dot{v} s$.
- 460. ἐξέπαισαν, 'have dashed me from my expectations'. Compare the use of ἐκκρούειν in Plato, Phaedrus, 228 Ε, ἐκκέκρουκάς με ἐλπίδος, $\mathring{\omega}$ Σώκρατες. Hopes are said to disappoint expectation when they are unfulfilled, just as winds are said to produce a calm, i.e. by their absence, e.g. Soph. Ajax, 674, δεινῶν ἄημα πνευμάτων ἐκοίμισε | στένοντα πόντον. Compare the similar apparent contradiction of language in 771, δοκημάτων δ' ἐκτὸς ἡλθεν ἐλπίς.
- 462. ἔνεμε, 'he talked of giving you', and so 467, ησθα, 'he pictured you as being'. The imperfect, as also the present, are not unfrequently thus employed to mark a statement or belief conceived without regard to actual fact. So Hdt. VII. 220, Leonidas declines to accompany the allies in their retreat from Thermopylae, μένοντι δὲ αὐτοῦ κλέος μέγα ἐλείπετο, 'he conceived that by remaining great glory was in store for him'.
- 464. By Homer the Pelasgians are placed in Thrace; Eur. uses $\Pi \epsilon \lambda a \sigma \gamma \iota \kappa \delta s$ either in the general sense of 'Greek', or, as here and Phoen. 107, of 'Argive'.
- 468. ἔγκληρα, 'an heiress' dower': so ἔγκληρος εὐνή, Hiρρ. 1011, 'marriage with an heiress'.—τάμα πεδία γῆς, the possessive is in agreement with the single substantival idea πεδία γῆς, 'my plain-lands', so $\mathcal{O}d$. XIV. 197, ἐμὰ κήδεα θυμοῦ, 'my heart-sorrows', and Pindar $\mathcal{O}l$. VIII. 42, Πέργαμος ἀμφὶ τεαῖς, ἥρως, χερὸς ἐργασίαις ἀλίσκεται, 'about thy handiwork'.

470. σήν still refers to the second son.

- 471. As an adjective δαίδαλον occurs in Aeschylus, and frequently in Homer and Pindar: the MSS. reading is Δαιδάλου, but there is no legend ascribing the club of Heracles to the workmanship of Daedalus. Pflugk suggests Μαινάλου comparing Propertius v. 9. 15 Maenalio iacuit pulsus tria tempora ramo Cacus. In that passage, however, Maenalio means nothing more than 'Arcadian', the club having been taken by Heracles, according to one legend, from the grove of Zeus at Nemea.
- 478. There is a play here on the simple meaning of ἀνάπτειν, found in Medea, 770, έκ τοῦδ΄ ἀναψόμεσθα πρυμνήτην κάλων, and its metaphorical signification, as in 35, κῆδος ἀνημμένον. Compare Tro. 811, ναύδετ ἀνήψατο πρυμνᾶν.

480. μεταβαλοῦσα, intransitive, 'instead'.

482. λουτρά has a double reference to the marriage and funeral rite, to the washing of the corpse and to the sacred water sprinkled on the bride by her own or the bridegroom's mother. There is a similar play on its double sense in Hec. 611, where Hecuba is speaking of her dead child Polyxene, ώς παίδα λουτροίς τοις πανυστάτοις έμην νύμφην τ' ἄνυμφον, παρθένον τ' ἀπάρθενον λούσω προθωμαί τ'.

Compare Romeo and Juliet, V. 3.

Sweet flower, with flowers thy bridal bed I strew—
O woe thy canopy is dust and stones!—
Which with sweet water nightly I will dew,
Or, wanting that, with tears distilled by moans.

- 483. γάμουs in its Homeric sense of 'the marriage-feast': cp. γάμου δαινύναι, ἀρτύειν. ἐστιᾶν usually takes a cognate accusative in the plural, as $\gamma \epsilon \nu \epsilon \theta \lambda \iota \alpha$, $\iota \epsilon \rho \dot{\alpha}$, $\nu \iota \kappa \eta \tau \dot{\eta} \rho \iota \dot{\alpha}$.
- 484. Compare Iph. Taur. 369, "Αιδης 'Αχιλλεύς η ἄρ', οὐχ ὁ Πηλέως | ὅν μοι προτείνας πόσιν κ.τ.λ., and Romeo and Juliet, IV. 5, 'Death is my son-in-law, death is my heir, My daughter he hath wedded'.
- 487. As the bee reproduces the essence of many flowers in a drop of honey, so Megara desires to reproduce her children's lamentations in a single expression of concentrated woe.

- 490. The MSS. have εἴ τις φθόγγον εἰσακούσεται, but the future seems out of place and Nauck's correction εἴ τις φθόγγος εἰσακούεται is preferable to Elmsley's εἴ τις φθόγγον εἰσακούσεται φθιτῶν.
- 493. μακαρία, a word specially associated with marriage congratulations: see Medea, 957, and Verrall's note.—βροτοῖς, 'in the opinions of men': cp. Soph. O. R. 8, ὁ πᾶσι κλεινὸς Οιδίπους καλούμενος. Here βροτοῖς must not be regarded as a dative of the agent, which is rare except after a perfect passive, but as a dative of reference, as appears e.g. from O. R. 40, ἀλλ', ὧ κράτιστον πᾶσιν Οιδίπου κάρα.
- 495. 'For your mere coming would be enough; for they who slay your children are too cowardly to face you'. The nominatives of the pronouns of the 1st and 2nd person are in tragedy invariably emphatic, and we must so render $\sigma \dot{\nu}$ if these lines are genuine. Probably they were inserted to explain $\kappa al \ \sigma \kappa \iota \dot{\alpha} \ \phi \dot{\alpha} \nu \eta \theta l \ \mu o \iota$,—your mere appearance as a shadow would be enough to alarm cowards such as Lycus. Pflugk remarks with justice that whether we render $\dot{\epsilon}s \ \sigma \dot{\epsilon} \ \gamma'$ tecum comparation ad pugnam tecum ineundam the sense equally requires $\pi \rho \dot{\phi}s$ instead of $\dot{\epsilon}s$. $\dot{\alpha} \lambda s \ l \kappa a \nu \dot{\phi}s$ is not justified by any parallel, though, if the line were deserving of emendation, we might punctuate $\dot{\alpha} \lambda \iota s \ \gamma \dot{\alpha} \rho \cdot \dot{\epsilon} \lambda \theta \dot{\omega} \nu \kappa . \tau . \lambda$.
- 499. $\tau \epsilon \kappa r \sigma i \sigma$, notice the use of the dative after $\omega \phi \epsilon \lambda \epsilon \hat{\imath} r$, which usually governs an acc.
- 504. If ὅπως be taken with ἥδιστα then μὴ λυπούμενοι must be rendered 'if ye do not fret yourselves'. But it may equally well be treated as $= \dot{o}\rho\hat{a}\tau\epsilon$ ὅπως: for this elliptical use of ὅπως to express an admonition (with a future) cp. Nubes, 824, ὅπως δὲ τοῦτο μὴ διδάξεις μηδένα, 'mind you tell nobody'.
- 506. 'Since time knows not how to keep hopes alive, but when it has sped its own business it straightway vanishes'. The aorist marks the instantaneous nature of the act. For $\delta\iota\acute{a}\pi\tau\alpha\sigma\theta\alpha\iota$, of the sudden disappearance of a bird in its heavenward flight, compare Hom. Od. I. 320 (describing the miraculous disappearance of Athene), $\delta\rho\nu\iota$ s δ' &s $\dot{a}\nu\sigma\pi\alpha\bar{a}\alpha$ $\delta\iota\acute{e}\pi\tau\alpha\tau\sigma$.
- 509. 'And yet (καὶ = atque) Fortune in one day stripped me of my glory (τὸ δνομαστὰ πράσσειν, cp. Alc. 605, κεδνὰ πράξειν) like some bird flying heavenward'. For πτερόν, 'a winged thing', cp. Phoen. 806, τὸ παρθένιον πτερόν, i.e. the Sphinx. πρὸς αlθέρα (supply πετόμενον), 'in heavenward flight'; so in Tro. 1320, πτέρυγι πρὸς αlθέρα is to be joined, 'with heaven-soaring wing'. The metaphor expressing the suddenness of the vicissitudes of fortune is illustrated by the legend of the eagle which carried away the cap of Tarquinius Priscus as he approached Rome (Livy, 1. 34). Compare Hor. Od. 1. 34, Hinc apicem rapax Fortuna cum stridore acuto sustulit. There is a close parallel to the sentiment in Proverbs, 23. 5, 'For riches certainly make themselves wings: they fly away as an eagle toward heaven'.

- 514. At this point Heracles is seen approaching on his return from Hermione (cp. 615). As it is only at v. 523 that he catches sight of the $\pi\rho\delta\pi\nu\lambda\alpha$ of the palace, which formed the background of the stage, it is manifest that he enters by one of the $\pi\delta\rho\delta\omega$ by which the chorus came into the $\delta\rho\chi\dot{\eta}\sigma\tau\rho\alpha$ from the sides of the stage.
- 515. ἀφασία δὲ κἄμ' ἔχει, 'neither do I know what to say of it', referring to Megara's question τl $\phi \hat{\omega}$; Paley assigns too much significance to the phrase when he interprets it as meaning that Amphitryon is silent during the conversation of Heracles and Megara.
 - 516. δν $\gamma \hat{\eta}$ s νέρθεν, supply ὄντα.
- 518. ποΐα, 'Nay, this is no fevered vision that I see'. ποΐος is very commonly thus used where the question is practically equivalent to a negation. Compare 1271, ποίους ποτ' ἢ λέοντας κ.τ.λ., 'was there ever lion or Typhon?' i.e. there never was. To the dimmed faculties of the old man the sudden apparition of Heracles seems like a waking dream; but the wife's instinct is not deceived. The singularly heteroclite word ὅνειρος οr ὅνειρον has for its plural ὅνειροι or ὁνείρατα: ὅνειρα is apparently only found, besides this instance, in one passage of the Authology.
- 521. $\Delta i \delta s \ \sigma \omega \tau \hat{\eta} \rho o s$, i.e. that god at whose altar you have taken refuge; see 48.
- 524. εἰσείδον, notice the characteristic use of the aorist (where English would employ a present) in exclamations and brief emphatic utterances which require no accurate definition of time. We may render, 'What joy to see!' So Hec. 1276, ἀπέπτυσα, 'Out upon you!', Elect. 248, ὅμωξ' ἀδελφὸν σόν, 'Alas for your brother!', Hipp. 715, καλῶς ἔλεξας, 'Well said!' Ar. Nubes, 1240, θαυμασίως ἥσθην θεοῖς, 'A pretty notion, indeed, your gods!' Above in 222 we might render οὐδ' Ἑλλάδ' ἥνεσ', 'and shame on Hellas!'
- 527. Heracles infers that the cause must be grave which compels Megara to quit the retirement which Athenian manners prescribed even to married ladies, and mingle in a promiscuous throng of men.
- 530. καινόν in the sense of 'sudden', 'violent', as in 1118, 1177 and in 1173 νεωτέρων κακῶν. Dindorf and Nauck read τί καινὸν ἡλθε τοῖσδε δώμασιν χρέος, and assign the following two lines to Amphitryon.

Paley keeps the MSS. reading and arrangements, remarking that the license of three actors speaking is in this play very sparingly used. In line 533 Heracles failing to elicit any information from the excited language of his wife, turns to Amphit on, but Megara interrupts. In fact Euripides shows much dramatic skill in confining the attention to a pair of speakers by the artifice of representing Megara as labouring under incontrollable emotion. Remark how throughout the early scenes the calm and dignified language of the aged Amphitryon contrasts with the impatience and excitability of the mother; when Amphitryon breaks silence in 586 it is to urge caution.

- 536. οἰκτρόν is active, 'compassionate', or 'emotional'.
- 538. "Απολλον, i.e. ἀποτρόπαιε, invoked under similar circumstances of alarm as Παιάν in 820.
- 543. 'He bears sway over Cadmus' seven-gated city'. The expression is confused and poetical; κράτος ἔχειν τινός = κρατεῖν τινός.
- 544. τl is the object of the expression $\mathring{\eta} \lambda \theta \epsilon \pi \rho \delta s \mathring{\nu} \mu \hat{a} s \phi \delta \beta \sigma s$ which is practically = $\dot{\epsilon} \phi \sigma \beta \epsilon l \sigma \theta \epsilon$. So in Tro. 60, $\mathring{\eta} \pi \sigma \delta \nu \nu \nu \dots \epsilon l s$ οἶκτον $\mathring{\eta} \lambda \theta \epsilon s \pi \nu \rho l \kappa \alpha \tau \eta \theta \alpha \lambda \omega \mu \dot{\epsilon} \nu \eta s$, where $\nu \nu \nu$ is accusative governed by the transitive idea $\mathring{\omega} \kappa \tau \epsilon \nu \rho \sigma s \nu \sigma s \nu \rho \lambda \theta \epsilon s$.
- 546. ὁρφάνευμ' ἐμῶν τέκνων, 'my friendless children'. For this use of a substantive followed by an attributive genitive to express the property of an adjective compare 700, δείματα θηρῶν, 'dread monsters', and 810, δυσγένει' ἀνάκτων, 'our low-born king': compare also Virg. Aen. XI. 407, artificis scelus, i.e. artifex scelestus.
- 547. $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa\tau\iota\sigma\alpha\iota\alpha\tau$. The Ionic form of the 3rd pers. plural passive and middle $-\alpha\tau$ 0 for $-\nu\tau$ 0 is rare in the tragedians and occurs only in the optative; generally it occurs at the end of the iambic line, e.g. Hel. 152, $\dot{\alpha}\nu\tau\iota\delta\omega\rho\eta\sigma\alpha\iota\alpha\tau$ 0. The older Attic prose writers use $-\alpha\tau\alpha\iota$, $-\alpha\tau$ 0 in the 3rd plur. of the perfect and plup. passive of verbs of consonantal stem, e.g. Thuc. III. 13, $\dot{\epsilon}\phi\theta\dot{\alpha}\rho\alpha\tau\alpha\iota$.
- 549. ἐνήμμεθα is Kirchhoff's correction of MSS. ἀνήμμεθα; the passive of ἀνάπτω is not used with an acc. in the sense 'to be arrayed in a thing'. Compare Ar. Nubes 72, διφθέραν ἐνημμένος.
 - 555. στρωτοῦ λέχους: compare 52, ἀστρώτω πέδω.
- 556. $\tau \delta \nu \gamma \epsilon \rho \nu \tau'$, 'that old man', reverts to $\pi \alpha \tau \eta \rho$ in the preceding line; see on 238.
- 557. 'Aye, pity indeed! He and pity are no near neighbours'. Paley and Dindorf (with MSS.) read $\alpha l\delta \omega s$ γ ' $\dot{\alpha}\pi o \iota \kappa \epsilon \hat{\iota}$, 'Pity is far removed from this divinity', i. e. $\ddot{\nu}\beta \rho \iota s$ implied from the preceding line; but the title of $\theta \epsilon \dot{\iota} s$ belongs much more appropriately to $\alpha \dot{\iota} \delta \dot{\omega} s$, and is in fact so applied in Ion, 337, where to Creusa's words åλλ' $al\delta o \psi \mu \epsilon \theta a$ Ion replies $o\dot{v}$ τὄρα πράξεις $o\dot{v}$ δέν ἄργος ἡ θεός, 'modesty is an obstructive goddess'. $al\delta \omega$ γε in the rendering given above must be understood to be an indignant repetition of the words of Heracles, γε being ironically affirmative, as in Iph. Taur. 1212, $\epsilon \dot{v}$ γε κηδεύεις πόλιν, 'Yes, good care you take of the city!' In this sense however we should rather have expected κείνος $al\delta \omega$; the pronoun being added with emphasis as e.g. in Iph. Aul. 833, έγω σοι δεξιάν; and Soph. Trach. 429, έγω δάμαρτα; Paley with good reason suspects corruption in $al\delta \omega$ s γ', and thinks it may be a gloss on $\tau \eta \sigma \delta \epsilon$ $\tau \eta s$ $\theta \epsilon a s$. He suggests κείνος γ' ἀποικεί. We should prefer καl $\tau \omega$ s; 'Certainly not; how should he?' used in vigorous denial, e.g. Aesch. Ag. 1310, Soph. Phil. 1247.

562. "Αιδου περιβολάς κόμης, 'head-gear of the grave'.

563. Nauck and Dindorf read σκότου, and Porson (Hec. 819) prefers the masculine form as magis Atticum. Our MSS. however read σκότουs here, and σκότοι (accus.) in 1159, and Photius says that σκότοι is used indifferently as masc. or neuter; as neuter it occurs both in Thuc. and Plato.

568. ἔλκημα is formed not from ἔλκω, but from its collateral form έλκώ: a derivative from ἔλκω would take the form ἔλκυσμα (which is here suggested by Cobet, Variae Lectiones p. 603), on the general principle that verbals in -μα follow in form the perfect passive; thus e.g. ἔλκυσμα: εἴλκυσμα:: ἔδεσμα: ἐδδήδεσμαι or as στρῶμα: ἔστρωμαι.

570. $\tau \hat{\varphi} \delta$ ὅπλ φ , i.e. the club.

571. For the omission of τ oùs $\mu \hat{\epsilon} \nu$ cp. 636, $\tilde{\epsilon} \chi$ ov σ i ν , où δ ' où.

576. τωνδε μαλλον, in preference to, instead of these.

580. $\pi o \mu \pi a \hat{i} \sigma \iota$, by the sending, at the bidding of Eurystheus; cp. Latin, missu Caesaris.

582. ὁ καλλίνικος. The article is attached to the predicate after verbs of naming when the predicate is a defining epithet; 'I shall not be called "καλλίνικος" as before'—καλλίνικος being a title specially appropriated to Heracles (cp. 1046); e.g. in Etruscan mirror-drawings we find him denominated Calanice, i.e. καλλίνικος (Müller, Ancient Art, p. 544). So Hdt. V. 77, οἱ δ' ἰπποβάται ἐκαλέοντο οἱ παχέες, 'the rich got the name "ἰπποβάται". λέξομαι is apparently passive; comp. Alc. 322, ἀλλ' αὐτίκ ἐν τοῖς μηκέτ' οὖσι λέξομαι; so τιμήσομαι, φυλάξομαι, στυγήσομαι, στερήσομαι are used as passives.

585. $\pi\rho\delta s\ \sigma o\hat{v}$, it is like you, it is your character. According to Greek popular views of morality to entertain feelings of hatred towards an enemy was not only pardonable but meritorious. This view is discussed and condemned by Plato in the first book of the Republic, chap. 6 seq., where Polemarchus, adopting the definition of δικαιοσύνη given by Simonides as τὸ τὰ ὀφειλόμενα ἐκάστῳ ἀποδιδόναι, explains it as meaning τὸ τοὺς φίλους εὖ ποιεῦν καὶ τοὺς ἐχθροὺς κακῶς. Compare fragm. 1077, ἐχθροὺς κακῶς δρᾶν ἀνδρὸς ἡγοῦμαι μέρος.

- 588. The following lines perhaps refer to Athenian political characters of the day. Euripides' sympathies went entirely with the middle classes of Athens: thus in a remarkable passage of the Supplices, 238, he says of the rich that they are ἀνωφελεῖς τε πλειόνων τ' ἐρῶσ' ἀεί, while the lower orders are δεινοὶ, νέμοντες τῷ φθόνω πλεῖον μέρος, and adds τριῶν δὲ μοιρῶν ἡ 'ν μέσω σώζει πόλεις | κόσμον φυλάσσουσ' ὅντιν' ἀν τάξη πόλις.
- 590. The use of the 1st aor. plur. $\ell\theta\eta\kappa\alpha\nu$ instead of $\ell\theta\epsilon\sigma\alpha\nu$ is a mark of late Attic; this and the lax metre of lines 590—2 afford grounds for suspecting the genuineness of the lines, or for placing this play among the latest of the poet's writings.
 - 502. υπ' άργίας, see note on 289, υπό δειλίας.
- 594. παρὰ γνώμην, 'lest you fall by inadvertence'; do not translate 'contrary to your expectation' (which would require σὴν to be supplied). γνώμη is used in this adverbial phrase (as well as in ἀπὸ γνώμης, ἄνευ γνώμης) in its ordinary sense of sound judgment. See Verrall on Medea 577.
- 596. ἔδραι are the quarters of the sky in which the appearance of birds was regarded as ominous; in Aesch. Ag. 116, the eagles typifying the Atridae appear $\pi \alpha \mu \pi \rho \epsilon \pi \tau \sigma \iota s$ εν εδραισι, and in Ar. Aves, 275, έξεδρος χώρα means 'an unlucky quarter'.
- 599. 'Go now to the gods of the hearth and with propitious words address them'. $\pi\rho\delta\sigma\epsilon\iota\pi\epsilon$ i.e. address them with the salutation $\chi\alpha\hat{\imath}\rho\epsilon$; so Ion, 665.
- 601. $\alpha\dot{\nu}\tau\dot{\delta}s$ of a person who being present to the thoughts of all need not be specially named; though to avoid obscurity $\ddot{\alpha}\nu\alpha\xi$ is added as an afterthought in the following line. Compare the Pythagorean $\alpha\dot{\nu}\tau\dot{\delta}s\ \xi\phi\alpha$.
- 605. Notice the double $\pi \rho i \nu$ in the antecedent and consequent clause; sometimes $\pi \rho \delta \tau \epsilon \rho o \nu$ takes its place in one clause, e.g. Thuc. II. 65, οὐ $\pi \rho \delta \tau \epsilon \rho o \nu \epsilon \pi a \upsilon \sigma a \nu \tau o \dots \pi \rho \iota \nu$ a $\upsilon \tau \delta \nu \epsilon \delta \nu \epsilon \delta \nu \epsilon \delta \nu$.
- 609. προσειπείν, i.e. οὐκ ἀτιμάσω τοὺς θεοὺς ὥστε μὴ προσειπείν αὐτούς. Compare Soph. O. C. 49, μή μ' ἀτιμάσης φράσαι, 'deem nic not too mean to tell me'.

610. $\gamma \acute{a}\rho$ ($\gamma \epsilon$, $\check{a}\rho a$) denotes a vague reference to the words of Heracles—'Then, it seems, you did go'—

612. θ εᾶs, i.e. Κόρηs, Persephone. δ ωρήμασι should not be taken with κρατήσαs, but is equivalent to τῆs θ εᾶs δούσηs. A modal dative is often used instead of a participial construction, e.g. in 543 where στάσει is equivalent to νοσησάσης χθονός in the preceding line; cp. Tro. 934, οὐ κρατεῖσθ' ἐκ βαρβάρων, | οὕτ' ἐς δόρυ σταθέντες, οὐ τυραννίδι, i.e. οὐ τυραννευόμενοι.

613. τὰ μυστῶν ὅργια, i.e. the Eleusinian mysteries. According to an old legend Heracles before descending to the lower world in quest of Cerberus desired to be initiated in the mysteries, but was debarred on the ground that he was not of Athenian birth: Theseus, however, unwilling to disappoint his friend, instituted in his honour the lesser Eleusinia to which aliens were admissible. This legend is referred to by Aristophanes, Ranae 156, where Heracles describes to Dionysus the happy condition of the initiated in Hades.—ηὐτύχησ΄. The happiness of those who prepared themselves by initiation for the descent to Hades is frequently remarked, e.g. Pindar, Fragm. 102, ὅλβιος ὅστις ἰδὼν ἐκεῖνα (i.e. τὰ τέλη) κοίλαν εἶσιν ὑπὸ χθόνα, and Soph. fragm. 719, ὡς τρισόλβιοι | κεῖνοι βροτῶν οἱ ταῦτα δερχθέντες τέλη | μόλωσ΄ ἐς Ἅλόου.

614. $\hat{\eta}$ καί asks a question with surprise, 'Is it really?' Compare 1138.

615. Έρριιών πόλιs, i.e. Hermione, a town near Troezen in Argolis where mystic rites were celebrated in honour of Chthonia, or Demeter. According to Pausanias a ravine was pointed out behind her temple there, through which it was said that Heracles dragged Cerberus up from Hades.

617. 'No (for I did not tell him), in order that I might first learn what was going on here'.

619. $\Theta\eta\sigma\epsilon\alpha$ is here perhaps to be scanned as a dissyllable, as ' $\Lambda\tau\rho\epsilon\alpha$ appears to be in Hel. 390 and Soph. $Aj\alpha x$, 1293: perhaps, however, in all these cases the final α is shortened: $\phi\sigma\epsilon\alpha$ occurs Elect. 599, 763, Hec. 882. $\epsilon\xi$ " $\Lambda\iota\delta\sigma\nu$ is a correction for $\epsilon\nu$ " Λ . of the MSS.: if $\epsilon\nu$ " Λ . be kept the augment in $\epsilon\chi\rho\delta\nu\iota\sigma$ must be regarded as long; but it is only in very rare cases that the augment is lengthened before the combination mute + liquid (except $\beta\lambda$); the copyist probably erroneously considered the words to refer to $\epsilon\chi\rho\delta\nu\iota\sigma$ rather than to $\kappa\sigma\iota\iota''_{\delta}\omega\nu$.

631. If $\gamma \epsilon$ be allowed to stand, the force which it gives to $\lambda \alpha \beta \omega \nu$ must be, 'I will lead them, aye, and even take them by the hand'. But Kirchhoff's emendation $\lambda \alpha \beta \omega \nu \tau \epsilon$, omitting δ ' in the next line, undoubtedly gives a better sense. - ἐφολκίδας. This is a favourite metaphor of Euripides, and occurs again 1424 infra, and Andr. 200. These passages help to explain the disputed lines, Troad. 570-1, παρά δ' εἰρεσία μαστῶν ἔπεται | φίλος 'Αστυάναξ. As in the preceding lines Andromache has been described as ξενικοῖς ἐπ' όχοις πορθμευομένην, 'wasted on an alien car', it appears obvious that παρὰ είρ. μαστῶν continues the nautical metaphor, and Prof. Tyrrell will have few converts to his theory that it means, 'beside his mother beating her breasts'. In fact παρὰ είρ. μαστῶν reduced to prose means no more than παρὰ μαστοῖς, just as ἀντίπρωρος in the Tragedians is simply an equivalent for evavtlos. Compare the metaphor in Plautus, Menaechmi, 442, ducit lembulum dierectum navis praedatoria. Shaksp. Ant. and Cleop. Act III. Sc. 9, 'My heart was to thy rudder tied by the strings, And thou should'st tow me after'.

634. apelvores, better, that is, in point of rank or fortune, as shown by the next line.

635. οἴ τ' οὐδὲν ὅντες, those who are mere ciphers. Notice the various forms in which this phrase occurs: ὁ μηδείς (Soph. Aj. 1114), τὸ μηδὲν ὧν or simply τὸ μηδέν (Soph. Ant. 234, Trach. 1107, Ajax, 1275, Eur. Hec. 622, fragm. 536 and Herod. passim), and ὁ μηδὲν ὧν or ὁ μηδέν (Soph. Ajax, 767, O. T. 1019, Eur. Tro. 613). Euripides also uses ὁ οὐδὲν (ὧν) in two passages besides the present, viz. Phoen. 598, and fragm. 287, in the latter of which passages ὁ οὐδὲν οὐδείς is contrasted, as here, with the ζάπλουτος and the γενναῖος. If there be a distinction between the uses of μηδέν and οὐδέν in these expressions it is that the former denotes one who is potentially (i.e. in the speaker's hypothesis) nothing, the latter one actually nothing or worthless. For the former compare fragm. 536, τὸ μηδὲν εἰς οὐδὲν ῥέπει, 'what is good for nothing comes to nothing'.

637. It has been suggested with considerable probability that in the words of the Chorus, Euripides here expresses his own feelings on the subject of old age at a time when he already began to feel its infirmities; lines 673—686 read very much like an expression of the poet's own sentiments on a retrospect of his literary life. We may well believe that this play, so similar in many respects to the Bacchae, was, like it, written at the court of Archelaus of Macedonia, in which case there is a touch of sadness in the reflection (lines 643 foll., repeated in 671) that the wealth and unlettered luxury with which the poet was surrounded in the tyrant's court afforded him no compensation for the loss of his golden youth. The ode may be compared with that in the Oed. Col. 1211, which was probably written under similar circumstances. The opening lines are evidently referred to by Cicero, De Sen. ch. 2, (senectus) quae plerisque senibus sic odiosa est ut onus se Aetna gravius dicant sustinere.

- 638. Altruas $\sigma \kappa o \pi \epsilon \lambda \omega \nu$. Euripides is probably thinking of the legend of Enceladus, imprisoned under Aetna, to which he again refers in 908. Compare the epithet Altrualos applied to the beetle in Pax 73, where it means 'huge', with a play also on the 'Aetnean' breed of horses.
- 641. 'Drawing over my sight a mantle of darkness'. βλεφάρω is our own correction of MSS. βλεφάρων. Compare Eur. Elect. 1221, ἐπιβαλὼν φάρη κόραις ἐμαῖς. καλύπτειν is 'to put over as a veil' (καλύπτρα) as in Ion, 1522, περικαλύψαι τοῖσι πράγμασι σκότον. This reading seems distinctly preferable to Nauck's βλεφάρων σκοτεινὸν φάος, 'veiling in darkness the light of my eyes', in which rendering σκοτεινόν is taken in a proleptic sense.
- 649. φόνιος is a vigorous epithet which Eur. is fond of applying somewhat indiscriminately, e. g. to ἄχεα, ὀδύνη.
- 650. κατὰ κυμάτων, beneath the waves, κατ' alθέρα, down the winds. 655. 'But if the gods had had understanding and wisdom according to man's ideas, men would have obtained a second youth, as a manifest stamp of virtue to such as possess it' (i.e. ἀρετή). Supplying ἄνδρες from the preceding line as the subject of ἔφερον ἄν the latter must be taken as = ἐφέροντο ἄν, 'would have won' (as a prize); comp. Oed. Rex, 763, ἄξιος γὰρ οἶ' ἀνὴρ | δοῦλος φέρειν ἢν τῆσδε καὶ μείζω χάριν. It is less satisfactory to take θεοί as the subject of ἔφερον ἄν, 'the gods would have conferred a double youth on such as possess virtue'—κατ' ἄνδρας, 'according to human standard'; so conversely Pindar, Ol. IX. 28, ἀγαθοί δὲ καὶ σοφοί κατὰ δαίμον' ἄνδρες ἐγένοντο, and compare St Paul's κατ' ἄνθρωπον λέγω, Rom. 3. 5.—The subject is suggested by the return of Heracles from Hades.
- 662. ἔβαν, with the kindred forms ἔσταν, ἀπέδραν are survivals of an old method of formation by the direct addition of the personal ending to the stem, without using the preterite of the root as, which is seen in ἔδοσαν &c. Compare the corresponding passive forms ἔκρυφθεν (Ηίρρ. 1247), κατένασθεν (Ar. Vespae, 662). In all these cases it would be incorrect to regard the shorter form as arising from the longer.—δισσούς διαύλους, 'two double courses', i.e. returning

663. ἀ δυσγένεια, i.e. οἱ δυσγενεῖs, abstract for concrete, as in 810, δυσγένεια ἀνάκτων = ἄναξ δυσγενήs. In accordance with the popular Greek sentiment Euripides regards δυσγένεια and κακία as practically synonymous; as he says, Hec. 380, ἐπὶ μεῖζον ἔρχεται | τῆs εὐγενείας ὅνομα τοῖσιν ἀξίοις, 'the mere name of nobility advances to the reality in the case of men of worth'.

664. ζωᾶs βιοτάν, 'period of existence'; notice the very definite distinction between ζωή, existence (as opposed to κατθανεῖν), and βίος, βιοτή, the duration of human life. It seems not improbable that ζοή was the form invariably used by the Tragedians, and in some passages the metre requires that it should be restored. See Rutherford, New Phryn. p. 5.

667. 'Even as amid clouds sailors can count the stars'. That this is the correct rendering of ἄστρων ναύταις ἀριθμὸς πέλει is shown by Tro. 620, ὧν γ' οῦτε μέτρον οῦτ' ἀριθμός ἐστί μοι,—'(Ills) which I can neither gauge nor count'. The point of the comparison lies in the fact that the virtue of the good is conspicuous amid evil surroundings, as the stars shine in a cloudy sky. 'So shines a good deed in a naughty world'.

671. Life is considered as a rolling stream which by its deposits mechanically raises a high bank. For the use of $\tau \iota s$ see 347, note.

673. 'Never will I cease blending victory with song', i.e. chanting of the victor Heracles. The expression is a clear reminiscence of the language of Pindar. The Χάριτες in Pindar are the bestowers of victory, and inspirers of the ἐπινίκιον, and hence are sometimes identified with the Muses (Ol. XIV. 13). Here the metaphor is apparently drawn from blending wines in the κρατήρ, for which compare Isthm. V. 2, κρατῆρα Μοισαίων μελέων κίρναμεν.

677. $\dot{\epsilon}\nu$ στεφάνοισι, i.e. the ivy crown awarded to poets. Cp. $\dot{\epsilon}\nu$ ὅπλοις εἶναι, esse cum gladio, $\dot{\epsilon}\nu$ οἴν $\dot{\varphi}$, inter pocula.

679. κελαδεί Μναμοσύναν, 'chants of by-gone days'. Compare Landor (writing in advanced old age when his memory was failing):

The Mother of the Muses, we are taught Is Memory: she has left me: they remain.

681. καλλίνικος when used independently, like a substantive, is always elsewhere masc. having vuros understood: here we may take its substantive to be ώδαν, implied by αείδω. καλλίνικον ώδαν without the article occurs in Elect. 865.

682. From the sense which $\pi\alpha\rho\dot{\alpha}$ has when used with an acc. to denote contemporaneous duration, e.g. παρὰ τὸν βίον ἄπαντα, 'lasting as long as life', it derives its further use of marking the association of things contemporaneously employed; here, 'amid the wassail and the notes of lyre and clarionet'. So Xen., Anab. II. 3. 15, speaks of τραγήματα, 'dessert', as eaten παρὰ ποτόν, 'with drink',--μολπή, of the note of the φόρμιγξ accompanied by the voice; cp. Homer, Od. I. 152.

684. Λίβυν, so called as being often made of the lotus which grew in Africa.

686. ἐχόρευσαν, 'admitted me of their crew'. There is nothing necessarily grotesque in the use of χορεύω, and any emendation is therefore superfluous. The passive χορευθέντα occurs infra 879, and άναχορεύω in Or. 582; the sense is primarily 'to initiate by dancing', then simply 'to initiate'. How intimately dancing is connected with initiation into mysteries even among savage tribes is seen from an interesting passage in Mr Lang's Custom and Myth (p. 41), where he points out that in the language of the Bushmen 'to dance' this or that means 'to be acquainted with this or that mystery'. Thus a Bushman when asked whether he knew the secrets of the mysteries of his tribe replied, 'No, only the initiated men of that dance know these things'. Mr Lang quotes from Lucian, Περλ δρχήσεως § 15, 'I pass over the fact that you cannot find a single ancient mystery in which there is not dancing. Most people say of those who reveal the mysteries that they "dance them out" (έξορχεῖσθαι). Compare θιασεύειν χόροις, Bacchae 379, 'to initiate in the dance'.

689. εῦπαιδα is here used not in its usual sense of 'having noble children' (which is the sense of euternos in 1405), but as equivalent to γενναΐον παΐδα, i.e. its relation to γόνον is that of apposition and not agreement; the meaning of the second member of the compound adjective is indeed merged in that of the substantive to which it is applied: so in Od. XXIII. 97, μητερ έμη δύσμητερ, Troad. 1291 ή μεγαλόπολις Τροία. With this sense of εὔπαις compare καλλίπαις, which is an epithet of Persephone in Or. 964, i.e. ή καλή παιs; in 839 of this play καλλίπαις has its usual adjectival force, 'consisting of fair children'.

690. ελλίσσονσαι, 'celebrating in the dance'; so Iph. Aul. 1480, ελλίσσετ' $d\mu\phi l$ ναών, $d\mu\phi l$ $\beta\omega\mu \delta \nu$ "Αρτεμιν. χορεύειν is also used in this sense.

- 694. 'For there is a good subject for my songs: he is the son of Zeus, and surpassing by his valorous deeds the renown of that noble birth, he brought about for men this tranquil life' (which they now enjoy). The position of the article shows that ἄκυμον must not be regarded as predicate, i.e. we must not translate, 'made their life tranquil'.
 - 700. δείματα θηρών: compare 546 note.
- 701. The following short scene is a good example of the Irony of Euripides. In this kind of dialogue the words of one of the speakers admit of a double meaning; in their more obvious sense, in which his interlocutor is supposed to understand them, they invite a sense of security by an assumed friendliness or humility, while their latent meaning prepares the audience for the coming catastrophe. Other good instances of this dramatic Irony are the scene between Pentheus and Dionysus, Bacch. 955, and that between Hecuba and Polymestor, Hecuba 986.
- 706. $\dot{\epsilon}\dot{\phi}'$ ofs, 'according as you undertook, on your own promise, to die': lit. 'on the terms on which'; cp. $\dot{\epsilon}\dot{\phi}'$ $\dot{\psi}$ and $\dot{\epsilon}\dot{\phi}'$ $\dot{\psi}\tau\epsilon$, 'on condition that', in introducing the terms of a treaty.
- 707. 'You bear hard upon me in my calamity, and add insult when my friends are dead'. $\dot{\epsilon}\pi l$ has its common sense of 'in addition to', and this line thus becomes a mere amplification of the preceding. For $\dot{\epsilon}\pi l$ in this sense cp. Antig. 759, où $\chi al\rho \omega \nu \dot{\epsilon}\pi l \psi \delta \gamma o i\sigma l \delta \epsilon \nu \nu \dot{\epsilon}\sigma \epsilon \dot{\epsilon}\mu \dot{\epsilon}$, 'revile as well as rebuke me'. So $\chi al\rho \epsilon \nu \dot{\epsilon}\pi l$ (e.g. Bacch. 1032), 'to rejoice in consequence of'. Contrast 741 infra $\dot{\nu}\beta \rho l \xi \epsilon \nu \dot{\epsilon}$'s 'to do insult to a person'. For $\delta \iota \dot{\omega} \kappa \epsilon \nu = ultro incursare$, compare insequi e.g. Cicero, pro Sulla § 81, vitae eius turpitudinem in summis eius periculis non insequebantur.
- 709. ἄ is governed by $\sigma \pi o v \delta \dot{\eta} \nu \ \xi \chi \epsilon \iota \nu$, which is $= \sigma \pi o v \delta \dot{\alpha} \zeta \epsilon \iota \nu$. Cp. 07. 1069, $\xi \nu \mu \dot{\epsilon} \nu \ \pi \rho \hat{\omega} \dot{\tau} \dot{\alpha} \ \sigma o \iota \ \mu o \mu \dot{\phi} \dot{\eta} \nu \ \dot{\epsilon} \chi \omega$, and Ion, 572, $\tau o \hat{\nu} \tau o \kappa \ddot{\alpha} \mu' \ \dot{\epsilon} \chi \epsilon \iota \pi \delta \theta o s$, i.e. $\tau o \hat{\nu} \tau o \kappa \dot{\alpha} \dot{\gamma} \dot{\omega} \ \pi o \theta \hat{\omega}$.
- 713. θύραθεν. Amphitryon standing at the outer door of the house can distinguish Megara and the children in the court within.
- 714. τί χρημ' ἔχεις τεκμήριον; not, 'What evidence have you for thinking so?' but, 'What do you infer (τί τεκμαίρει) when you say I think (δοκῶ)?'
 - 725. 'Put an end to the delay of our work', finish off our work quickly. Various corrections of the line have been suggested of which perhaps Paley's $\dot{\omega}s \, \dot{\alpha}\nu \, \sigma \chi o \lambda \hat{\eta}$ (=at last)... $\pi \dot{\delta}\nu o \nu$ is the only one which can be considered an improvement on the text as it stands.

726. 'Then go; thou art bound for the place where it is fit thou shouldst go; the rest perchance will concern another'. $\sigma \dot{\nu}$ and $\delta \lambda \lambda \dot{\nu}$ are opposed. δ' ov is commonly thus used with a certain emphasis in dismissing a subject from further consideration: comp. Rhesus, 868, $\sigma \dot{\nu}$ ov $\nu \dot{\nu} \dot{\nu} \dot{\nu} \dot{\nu}$ ($\epsilon \pi \dot{\nu} \dot{\nu} \dot{\nu} \dot{\nu} \dot{\nu}$), $\epsilon \dot{\nu} \dot{\nu} \dot{\nu} \dot{\nu} \dot{\nu}$ ov $\delta \dot{\nu} \dot{\nu} \dot{\nu} \dot{\nu}$ (then think so, cherish this delusion, since it pleases you'; Ar. Ach. 186, of δ' ov $\delta \dot{\nu} \dot{\nu} \dot{\nu} \dot{\nu} \dot{\nu} \dot{\nu}$, 'then let them rave'. Cp. 213, note.

728. ἐς καλόν = ἐς καιρόν, 701.

729. The MSS. here have βρόχοισι δ' ἀρκύων γενήσεται. Hermann would read βρόχοις δ' ἐν ἀρκύων γενήσεται. Nauck δεδήσεται for γενήσεται. Our reading is adopted from a suggestion of Mr Munro in the Journal of Philology No. 22, p. 285; the correction seems in extremely probable one, both because the alteration required is slight, and ἐνήσεται, as a rare word, would be especially liable to be tampered with by a copyist. ἐνήσεται may either be middle or passive (μετήσομαι is passive in Herod. V. 35). For the metaphor compare Med. 1277 ἄρκυες ξίφους, and Aesch. Cho. 576, νεκρὸν | θήσω ποδώκει περιβαλών χαλκεύματι, 'I will strike him dead, ensnaring him with swift steel'.

731. ὁ παγκάκιστος in this position is strictly an expletive,—

'craven that he is!'

735. μέγας ὁ πρόσθε ἄναξ=ὁ πρ. μ. ἄναξ: the trajection is not unusual; cp.*Prom. Vinct.*313, τὸν νῦν χόλον παρόντα, and above 145, note.

740. χρόν φ μέν, tandem aliquando; μέν implies a suppressed πρότερον δὲ οὐ.

741. It is unnecessary to look for a difference of meaning between $\ddot{v}\beta\rho\epsilon\iota s$ here and $\ddot{v}\beta\rho\iota \nu$ in 708; still less need we read (with Elmsley) $\ddot{v}\beta\rho\iota\sigma\mu$, on the ground of the rare use of the plural; $\ddot{v}\beta\rho\epsilon\iota s$ $\dot{v}\beta\rho\iota\xi\epsilon\nu$ occurs in Bacch. 247, and $o\mathring{v}s$ $\ddot{v}\beta\rho\epsilon\iota s$ $\dot{a}\pi\dot{\omega}\lambda\epsilon\sigma a\nu$ is perhaps to be restored in Supp. 495.

744. ξδοσαν, the aorist, where we should use a present, marks the suddenness of the emotion; the sensation is already in the past before the speaker gives expression to it in words. Compare 524, note.

745. 'There has come home to him (or perhaps 'recoiled upon him') a fate which never before would the king (Lycus) have dreamt of undergoing'.

748. τις used with sinister significance, as in Soph. El. 1406, βοά τις

 $\ell\nu\delta\sigma\nu$ (i. e. Aegisthus, who is being killed by Orestes).—The following scene, like that of the blinding of Polymestor in the Hecuba, was, Mr Munro remarks, probably imitated from the famous murder-scene in the Agamennon.

758. 'Laid down an idle speech concerning the gods'. κατέβαλε, posuit: Pflugk compares Herod. I. 122, οἱ δὲ τοκέες κατέβαλον φάτιν ώς κτλ. The phrase is drawn from laying a foundation: compare 1261, ὅταν δὲ κρηπὶς μὴ καταβληθῆ γένους | ὀρθῶς.

764. Θήβαs is in apposition with $\alpha \sigma \tau \nu$: perhaps however we should read Θήβαs.

774. ὁ χρυσὸs ἄ τ' εὐτυχία together form one idea, 'wealth with good fortune'; hence ἐξάγεται is singular and ἐφέλκων agrees with χρυσόs only.

775-6. We have kept in the text the reading of the MSS.; most editors have considered some correction necessary. Hermann would omit ἄδικον, while Bothe to preserve the metrical correspondence repeats ἔτεκον in 767. Paley and Nauck adopt L. Dindorf's correction φρενών for φρονείν, on the ground that φρονείν never means 'to be proud' (μέγα φρονείν), nor can έξάγεται φρονείν stand for ἄγει ἔξω τοῦ φρονείν. But neither, we would contend, is έξάγεται φρενών Greek for 'drives out of their senses'. A comparison of numerous passages quoted in L. and S. shows that έξάγεσθαι can hardly have any other meaning here than 'prompt', 'impel': in this sense it is more common in the active, but Xenophon and Plutarch employ the middle. Compare the use of έξάγει (passive) in 1212. It is by no means so certain as editors generally assume it to be that φρονείν cannot = μέγα φρονείν. In Eur. Elect. 383, all MSS. read οὐ μὴ φρονήσεθ' οῖ κενῶν δοξασμάτων | $\pi \lambda \eta \rho \epsilon \iota s \pi \lambda \alpha \nu \hat{\alpha} \sigma \theta \epsilon$, 'be not high-minded, ye who err through being inspired with idle imaginations'. Badham and Paley read there οὐ μη $\dot{a}\phi\rho\rho\nu\dot{\eta}\sigma\epsilon\theta'$, but it is to be observed that $\dot{a}\phi\rho\rho\nu\epsilon\hat{\iota}\nu$ is a word otherwise unknown, except as a pres. participle in Homer. Again a strong case in favour of this meaning is fragm. 739 of Euripides:

φεῦ φεῦ τὸ φῦναι πατρὸς εἰγενοῦς ἄπο ὅσην ἔχει φρόνησιν ἀξίωμά τε.

'What pride and consequence does noble birth imply!' Possibly again φρόνησις=pride in Eur. Supp. 216, άλλ' ή φρόνησις τοῦ θεοῦ μεῖζον σθένειν ζητεῖ, τὸ γαῦρον δ' ἐν φρεσὶν κεκτημένοι δοκοῦμεν εἶναι δαιμόνων σοφώτεροι.

777. οὔτις ἔτλα, 'none can see'; compare Homer, Od. x. 327, οὐδὲ γὰρ οὐδὲ τις ἄλλος ἀνὴρ τάδε φάρμακ' ἀνέτλη, 'no other man can resist'; in both passages the negative is proved by experience of the past.

778. χρόνου τὸ πάλιν, 'the backward course of time's race', i.e. the future, or the close of life. So an old man is spoken of by Pindar, Ol. XI. 87, as ἴκοντι νεότατος τὸ πάλιν ήδη, where old age is the second κῶλον of the δίαυλος, running in a counter direction to youth. Here the selfish and lawless man, blind to the future and intent only on the immediate success of his schemes, is compared to a driver who wrecks his chariot by turning the $\sigma\tau\dot{\eta}\lambda\eta$ too abruptly. He allows $\nu\delta\mu$ os, like a troublesome competitor, to pass (or perhaps gives it the 'go-by'), and gives rein to his unruly appetites, as the nivloxos to the outer tracehorse, δεξιός σειραίος, in Soph. El. 721. For παρέμενος comp. 732 in the same passage, παρείς | κλύδων' ἔφιππον ἐν μέσφ κυκώμενον, 'letting pass the wave of chariots surging in mid-course'. $\epsilon \phi \epsilon \lambda \kappa \omega \nu$ above sustains the same metaphor; compare Ion, 1149, ἴππους μὲν ἤλαυν' ές τελευταίαν φλόγα | "Ηλιος, έφέλκων λαμπρον 'Εσπέρου φάος. language of 780 is perhaps a reminiscence of Pindar, Ol. VI. 97, μη θράσσοι χρόνος όλβον έφέρπων.

782. $\xi \epsilon \sigma \tau \alpha l$, i.e. with houses built of squared stone.

789. $\tau \partial \nu \kappa$. $\dot{\alpha} \gamma \hat{\omega} \nu \alpha$ is the acc. after $\beta \hat{\alpha} \tau \epsilon$, 'come to witness'.

790. $\delta \epsilon \nu \delta \rho \hat{\omega} \tau \iota$, the epithet recalls the 'woods that wave o'er Delphi's steep', consisting of bay-trees, sacred to Apollo.

792. We adopt Bothe's emendation $\dot{\eta}\chi\epsilon\hat{\iota}\tau'$ for $\ddot{\eta}\xi\epsilon\tau'$.

798. For the tautology cp. Persae, 543, λέκτρων εὐναί, Hipp. 180, δέμνια κοίτης.—συγγενεῖς is here active, = κοινόν γόνον ἔχουσαι.

801. Alcmene was grandchild of Perseus, being the daughter of his son, Electryon.

802. 'For long since (το παλαιον ήδη) thy union with her was proved credible to me, contrary to my expectation'. οὐκ ἐπ' ἐλπίδι, not in accordance with expectation; this is a rather unusual sense of ἐπί, but cp. Trach. 662, ἐπὶ προφάνσει θηρός, 'in accordance with the beast's showing', lit. 'on the basis of'.

809. μοι, 'in my eyes'. For δυσγένεια ἀνάκτων see on 546.

- 811. ἄ which is fem. sing., as the scansion proves, has for its antecedent δυσγένεια, and refers to king Lycus. είσορῶν is used after φαίνει in a peculiar epexegetic manner which may be illustrated by the use of ἰδεῶν in Plato, Rep. VI. 495 E, δοκεῖς οῦν τι διαφέρειν αὐτοὺς ἰδεῶν χαλκέως, 'do you think that they differ at all in look from a brassfounder?' Cp. also 991, ώς ὁρῶν ἐφαίνετο. Such infinitives are much commoner with adjectives, e.g. in 750, μέλος ἐμοὶ κλύειν φίλιον, 'a strain to my ears welcome'. Translate, 'who is now showing, for men to see, whether justice still finds favour with the gods'. With ἀγώνων ἄμιλλαν compare λέκτρων εὐναί, 798, and ζωᾶς βιστάν, 664.
- 815. At this point the Chorus catch sight of the figure of Madness, escorted by Iris as messenger of Hera. From 880 it appears that Madness appeared in an aerial car, such as that of Oceanus in the Prometheus Vinctus (lines 284 foll.). Iris appeared in a similar car which at line 873 was raised again by the $\mu\eta\chi\alpha\nu\dot{\eta}$ out of the spectators' sight. The two cars are apparently lowered until they rest on the roof of the palace represented as the back-ground of the proscenium, whence the speeches of Iris and Madness are delivered, like that of the Watchman in the opening scene of the Agamemnon. At line 874 the car of Madness was lowered behind the proscenium.
- 817. οΐον = ὅτι τοῖον, as commonly in sentences expressing emotion. Compare Xen. Cyrop. VII. 3, § 14, κατοικτείρων τὴν γυναῖκα οἴου ἀνδρὸς στεροῖτο, 'pitying her for losing such a husband'.
- 819. $\ell\lambda a$, intransitive. The verb $\ell\lambda a\omega$ which supplements $\ell\lambda a\omega \nu\omega$ in its other tenses is scarcely used in its present forms, except by Homer. The only other passage where it is known to exist in tragedy is a fragment (330) of Aeschylus. It is used in the imperative by Pindar (Isthm. IV. 38) and by Xenophon once in the imperative ($d\pi \ell\lambda a$), once in the infinitive. In every instance it is used intransitively. Contrast the transitive $\ell\lambda a\nu\nu \epsilon$ in 837.
- 828. $\tau \delta \chi \rho \epsilon \omega \nu$ is the reading of both the Florentine MSS. and of one of the Paris copies; the Aldine has $\tau \delta \chi \rho \hat{\eta} \nu$, a remarkable form which occurs in Hec. 260, and not elsewhere, though W. Dindorf would restore it here, as well as in Iph. Taur. 1486. Nauck prefers to write $\tau \delta \chi \rho \hat{\eta}$. Commentators, ancient as well as modern, have misunderstood the origin of $\chi \rho \hat{\eta} \nu$ in this use. Eustathius, who is followed by Porson, as well as by L. and S., treats it as infinitive and $= \chi \rho \hat{\eta} \nu a$, on the analogy of $d\pi o \chi \rho \hat{\eta} \nu$: but $\chi \rho \hat{\eta}$ and $d\pi \delta \chi \rho \eta$ present many dissimilarities of conjugation. The analogy of $\tau \delta \delta \delta \omega \nu$, $\tau \delta \pi \rho o \sigma \hat{\eta} \kappa \nu \delta \omega$. shows that the neuter participle and not the infinitive of impersonal verbs is employed to express the substantival property of the verb. In fact $\chi\rho\hat{\eta}\nu$ is only another form of $\chi\rho\epsilon\omega\nu$ (for which see note on 21), and consequently is a neuter participle. For the peculiar contraction compare $\pi\lambda\hat{\eta}\nu$ i.e. $\pi\lambda\hat{\epsilon}o\nu$ with $\chi\rho\hat{\eta}\nu$, $\chi\rho\epsilon\hat{\omega}\nu$ or $\chi\rho\epsilon\hat{\omega}\nu$ as it is written in MSS. of Herodotus. The same contraction is probably present in $d\kappa\hat{\eta}\nu$, beside $d\kappa\hat{\epsilon}\omega\nu$, the latter of which is apparently in some passages a neuter participle used adverbially, e.g. in Od. XXI. 89, $d\kappa\hat{\epsilon}\omega\nu$ $\delta a\ell\nu\nu\sigma\theta\hat{\epsilon}$ and $\ell\ell$ in ℓ in ℓ

831. κοινόν is Wakefield's conjecture for καινόν: 'the guilt of shedding kindred blood'.

837. κάλων ἐξιέναι means 'to slacken the reefs', i.e. to set all sail. Hence πάντα κάλων ἐξιέναι passed into a proverb, 'to use every exertion'; see Medea, 278; in the same metaphorical sense Pindar uses ἐξιέναι lστίον, Pyth. I. 91.

840. χόλος is attracted to the case of οἶος, the construction being τὸν "Ηρας χόλον οἶός ἐστι. Cp. Trach. 95, "Αλιον αίτῶ τοῦτο καρῦξαι τὸν 'Αλκμήνας πόθι μοι πόθι παῖς ναίει ποτ'.

841. $\gamma\nu\hat{\varphi}$, 'recognize', as a thing with which he is already familiar; $\mu d\theta \eta$, 'learn', as a fresh experience. Compare Ajax, 667, $\epsilon l\sigma \delta \mu \epsilon \sigma \theta a \ \mu \epsilon \nu \ \theta \epsilon \sigma \delta s \ | \ \epsilon l\kappa \epsilon \iota \nu \ \mu a \theta \eta \sigma \delta \mu \epsilon \sigma \theta a \ \delta' \ A \tau \rho \epsilon l \delta a \ \sigma \epsilon \beta \epsilon \iota \nu$.

843. εὐγενοῦς is to be repeated before μητέρος: so in Alc. 325, καί σοι μέν, πόσι, γυναΐκ άριστην ἔστι κομπάσαι λαβεῖν, ὑμῖν δε, παίδες, μητρὸς ἐκπεφυκέναι, $d\rho l\sigma \tau \eta s$ is to be repeated before $\mu \eta \tau \rho \delta s$.

846. φόνους is Dobree's correction of MSS. φίλους (W. Dindorf δόμους), which is probably a mistake of copying caused by φίλοις in the preceding line; but there is this further difficulty in 845, that ἄγασθαί τινι means in Attic 'to take delight in'; it is only in Homer, and then only in the aorist middle, that it means 'to bear a grudge against'. There is therefore ground for suspecting corruption in both lines, and we would suggest in 845 οὖκ ἀγασθῆναι φόνοις and in 846 ἐπ' ἀνθρώπων πόλεις.—τιμάς, 'honourable functions', as in Ηἰρρ. 107 τιμαῖοι δαιμόνων means actions especially associated with any god, as ἔρως with Aphrodite.

850. We have adopted Paley's suggestion in the text in place of the MSS. reading οὖ γέ μ' ἐσπέμπεις: οὖ γε can only mean quippe cuins.

851. ἄβατον—ἐξημερώσας, see 20. Perhaps this is a reference to the civilizing effect of road-making, as tending to clear the country of banditti, such as Cycnus. Cp. Aesch. Eum. 13:

> πέμπουσι δ' αὐτὸν καὶ σεβίζουσιν μέγα κελευθοποιοί παίδες 'Ηφαίστου, χθόνα ανήμερον τιθέντες ήμερωμένην.

Similarly Soph. fragm. 233, Theseus, speaking of his victory over Sinis, says παρακτίαν | στείχων άνημέρωσα κνωδάλων δδον. Compare also Pindar, Isthm. III. 75.

πιτνούσας ὕπο, i.e. καταβαλλομένας ὕπο. πίπτω is ordinarily used for the passive of βάλλω, 'throw'; compare 555.

857. σωφρονείν, to shew your sober sense; said of course with scornful reference to the name and office of Λύσσα.

858. $\delta\rho\hat{\omega}\sigma\alpha$, for the plural verb joined with a nominative participle in the singular cp. 1207, Ικετεύομεν άμφι σαν γενειάδα και γόνυ και γέρα προσπίτνων.

859. 'But if I must do Hera's bidding and follow thee with speed, and in full cry, as the hounds the huntsman, go I will $(\gamma \epsilon)$: not the deep with its roaring waves, nor the earthquake nor hurtling thunderbolt gasping travail-throes, is as devouring as I shall be in my race to the heart of Heracles'. ola is probably an adverb, and not therefore in agreement with στάδια. The MSS. read σταδιοδραμοθμαι which is formed contrary to analogy, since according to a well-known law for the composition of verbs, when the first member of the compound is any other part of speech than a preposition, the new verb takes a derivative form, generally in $-\epsilon \omega$, as though from some intermediate noun-form, e.g. μισθοφορείν. The regular formation would therefore be σταδιοδρομήσω through σταδιοδρόμος.

865. 'Their destined murderer (ὁ κανών) shall not know that he is slaving his own children'. We might be tempted to think that either καίνων in the first place or έναρών in the second would be more appropriate in tense; but $\delta \kappa \alpha \nu \omega \nu = qui$ occiderit, for which use of the aor. partic. compare P.V. 210, Γαΐα...προύτεθεσπίκει | ώς οὐ κατ' ίσχυν οὐδὲ πρὸς τὸ καρτερον | χρείη, δόλφ δὲ τοὺς ὑπερσχόντας κρατεῖν, 'the fated victors should prevail by craft'. The aor, partic, is used in an exactly similar manner in laws and decrees, e.g. ὁ ἀποκτείνας, 'any man who shall slay'.

867. βαλβίδων ἄπο, i.e. ready to start on the wild race described above, 860. Comp. Vespae, 548, καὶ μὴν εὐθύς γ' ἀπὸ βαλβίδων περὶ τῆς ἀρχῆς ἀποδείξω.

869. 'And he draws his breath wildly like a bull that pants for the onset'.

871. κατανλήσω, 'frenzy with the sound of the pipe', an expression said to be derived from the Corybantic worship. Perhaps however κατανλήσω is to be understood literally, and the sounds of a pipe are actually heard within the house as the Chorus utters line 896. Such a supposition is further favoured by the MSS. reading in 879, λύσσαις ἐναύλοις, 'ravings caused by the pipe'. From passages such as Nubes 313 (μοῦσα βαρύβρομος αὐλῶν), it is clear that the note of the αὐλός in no way resembled the shrill clear tones of the flute; the Phrygian αὐλός rather resembled a trumpet or clarionet. In its mystic use it has its counterpart in the jurupari pipes with which the Brazilians make their 'devil-music'; for which see again Lang, Custom and Myth, p. 43.

876. πόλεοs is the reading of C, but it will scarcely stand, though it is kept by Dindorf and Nauck. Perhaps it is a metrical correction of a copyist.

878. μανίαισιν is scanned as a trisyllable like Μινύαισι in 220.

879. ἀναύλοις is a limiting epithet which defines the application of $\chi_{0\rho\epsilon\nu\theta\ell\nu\tau\alpha}$, as $\tau\nu\mu\pi\acute{a}\nu\omega\nu$ ἄτερ corrects $\chi\acute{o}\rho\epsilon\nu\mu\alpha$ in 891.

881. evôlôóral, subdere, condere stimulos is not elsewhere used in this sense. In the plural $\tilde{a}\rho\mu\alpha\tau\alpha$ (like $\tilde{l}\pi\pi\sigma\iota$) often means 'chariot and horses': so $\tau\delta\xi\sigma$, 'bow', $\tau\delta\xi\alpha$, 'bow and arrows'.

882. $\dot{\epsilon}\pi\dot{\imath}$ $\lambda\dot{\omega}\beta\dot{\alpha}$, 'to work mischief'. Cp. 591, $\dot{\epsilon}\phi$ ' $\dot{\alpha}\rho\pi\alpha\gamma\alpha\hat{\imath}\sigma\imath$.

883. δφεων $la\chi \dot{\eta} \mu a \sigma \iota$, 'hissing snakes', see note on 410. It is in apposition with $\ddot{a}\rho \mu a \sigma \iota$.—The epithet $\mu a \rho \mu a \rho \omega \sigma \dot{\sigma}$ is probably taken from the story of Medusa, whose visage turned beholders into stone; a fem. $\mu a \rho \mu a \rho \dot{\omega} \tau \dot{\sigma}$ is an epithet of Medusa in the late writer, Lycophron.

886. ἐκπνεύσεται, 'will be slain'; the tragic writers hardly ever use the passive of κτείνω, preferring intransitive verbs, θνήσκειν and the like; see note on πιτνούσας, 853.

888. γένος ἄγονον, 'thy unhappy son'; see note, 114.

891. The mad fit of Heracles being compared to the religious frenzy of the bacchants there is an appropriateness in the use of $\kappa\alpha\tau\acute{\alpha}\rho\chi\epsilon\tau\alpha\iota$, a word specially used of the initial acts of the religious rites which preceded the slaughter of the victim.

892. κεχαρισμένα is used adverbially, 'not in a manner meet for the thyrsus of Bromius', which is simply an expansion of τυμπάνων ἄτερ, as the drum was an essential in the rites of the Bacchae, and claimed by Bacchus as his own invention, Bacch. 59, τύμπανα, 'Pέας τε μητρὸς ἐμά θ' εὐρήματα.

- 894. The construction is continued from 891; 'a dance arousing to bloody deeds, not such as accompanies the outpouring of the grape-juice in honour of Dionysus'.
- 912. The meaning is 'I believe: I need no seer to confirm your tale'. Rhesus, 952, ἥδη τάδ' οὐδὲν μάντεων ἔδει φράσαι.
- 916. 'Our sufferings transcend all utterance'. So Hec. 667, κάτι μάλλον ἢ λέγω, | δέσποιν', δλωλας.
 - 921. The accusative τύχας is governed by λέγε.
- 922. The altar here mentioned is that of Zevs έρκεῖοs in the αὐλή, the same at which Megara worships, line 715, not that of Zevs σωτήρ which stood outside the house; see lines 48, 53.
- 926. Paley remarks that the blood of the victims ($l\epsilon\rho\dot{\alpha}$, probably a pig) was to be sprinkled on both the person and the house of the bloodguilty person. The actual sacrifice was not performed till certain preliminary rites had been duly observed, e.g. the carrying of the knife with the basket, $\kappa\alpha\nu\sigma\hat{\nu}\nu$, containing the barley, round the altar, and the assembling of the people in solemn silence. A lighted brand from the altar was then dipped in the water, with which the bystanders were sprinkled. The next step was to scatter the barley-grains, and finally, to slay the victim. $-\beta\omega\mu\omega\hat{\nu}$ is gen. after $\dot{\epsilon}\nu$ $\kappa\dot{\nu}\kappa\lambda\omega$. $-\phi\theta\dot{\epsilon}\gamma\mu\alpha$ δ' $\delta\sigma\iota\sigma\nu$ $\epsilon'i\chi\sigma\mu\epsilon\nu$, i.e. $\eta\dot{\nu}\phi\eta\mu\omega\hat{\nu}\mu\epsilon\nu$, which from the sense of abstaining from ill-omened words acquired that of preserving silence.
- 932. $\dot{\epsilon}\nu$ localizes $\dot{\epsilon}\phi\theta a\rho\mu\dot{\epsilon}\nu\sigma$ s, the change consisting in a rolling of the eyes. Compare Tro. 1179, $\chi\epsilon\hat{\iota}\rho\epsilon s...\dot{\epsilon}\nu$ $\check{\alpha}\rho\theta\rho\sigma$ s $\check{\epsilon}\kappa\lambda\nu\tau\sigma$ s, 'hands relaxed at the joints'.
- 938. The reading of MSS. $\mu \hat{a}s$ $\mu \hat{o}t$ $\chi \epsilon \iota \rho \delta s$ is kept by Paley and Dindorf; but such expressions as $\lambda a \hat{a}as$ $\chi \epsilon \rho \delta s$, 'on the left hand', $\pi \sigma \tau \dot{\epsilon} \rho as$ $\tau \dot{\eta}s$ $\chi \epsilon \rho \dot{\delta}s$, 'on which hand', furnish no analogy for this purely instrumental use of $\chi \epsilon \iota \rho \dot{\delta}s$: hence we have adopted Nauck's $\mu \iota \dot{a}s$ $\mu \dot{c}s$ $\chi \epsilon \iota \rho \dot{\delta}s$, for which use of $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa$ cp. Philoct. 91, $\dot{\epsilon}\xi$ $\dot{\epsilon}\nu \dot{\delta}s$ $\pi \sigma \delta \dot{\delta}s$, 'using one foot', Ar. Eq. 670, $\dot{\epsilon}\xi$ $\dot{\epsilon}\nu \dot{\delta}s$ $\sigma \tau \dot{\delta}\mu a \tau \sigma s$, 'with one voice'.
- 940. $\dot{\epsilon}\pi\dot{l}$. 'I will purge my hands (from the blood of Eur.) as well as his who is already slain'. Compare 708, note.
 - 942. δπλον χερός, my club.
- 945. The κανών was the red chalked line, Lat. rubrica, used by masons in marking stone in straight lines (ὀρθοί κανόνες, Tro. 6); the red horizontal rays of the rising sun are κανών σαφής, Eur. Supp.

- 650. The τύκοs was the hammer or gavil employed in working the stone into rectangular blocks (κανόνων τυκίσματα, Tro. 812). On this passage Dr Schliemann remarks, 'This description can only refer to the Cyclopian walls of well-fitted polygons such as we see in the western part of the great circuit walls (i.e. of Mycenae)....It appears certain that Euripides visited Mycenae, and that the grand Cyclopian walls of the Acropolis made a profound impression on him'. (Mycenae and Tiryns, p. 38.)
- 946. πόλιν repeats τὰ Κ. βάθρα; compare 465, θηρός...λέοντος: so too Helena 2, 3, δς...Αἰγύπτου πέδον...ὐγραίνει γύας. Dindorf and Nauck read πάλιν.
- 947. $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa$ τοῦδε βαlνων, 'thereafter starting'; so $\beta\hat{\eta}$ δ' $\dot{\epsilon}$ ναι, 'he started to go'.
 - 948. εΙσέβαινε, 'in thought he mounted'; see on 462.
 - 950. διπλους, 'simultaneous'; see on 328.
- 954. Nhow $\pi \delta \lambda v$, Megara. When the four sons of Pandion reconquered Attica they divided the empire amongst them, and Megara fell to Nisus, his elder brother Aegeus, the father of Theseus, obtaining Athens.
- 957. ès, lit. 'up to', and so in a purely adverbial sense 'only'; just as it is used to mark the superior limit of number, ès τριάκοντα, 'about thirty'. 'Having stayed for but a short halt'. The expression is a poetical inversion of the natural idiom διελθόντος βραχέος χρόνου. Kirchhoff's reading ώς for ès is scarcely an improvement.
- 959. Heracles imagines himself to be present at the Isthmian games.
- 962. ἀκοὴν ὑπειπών, 'bespeaking the hearing of no one', i.e. of an imaginary audience; ὑπειπεῖν is strictly 'to say by way of introduction'; before announcing the victor's name it was customary for the herald to call the attention of the crowd by proclaiming ἀκούετε, λεώ.
- 964. νιν is apparently accusative after θιγών. Verbs of contact in ante- and post-classical Greek occasionally take an acc. of the person, a gen. of the part touched, e.g. Iliad, II. 316, την δ' έλελιξάμενος πτέρυγος λάβεν, and in the N.T. κρατεῖν τινὰ τῆς χειρός. In these instances, however, we must note that λαμβάνειν, κρατεῖν, when they have a single object, indifferently govern acc. or gen., whereas θιγγάνειν and ψαύειν (except in a metaphorical sense) in Attic invariably are constructed with a genitive. An exact parallel to the present construction in Attic has yet to be pointed out.
 - 965. ξενώσεως, strange conduct.

- 967. $\nu\iota\nu$, i.e. Amphitryon, is governed by $\dot{\omega}\theta\epsilon\hat{\imath}$: not by $\psi\alpha\dot{\imath}\epsilon\iota\nu$, since $\nu\iota\nu$ is never reflexive and so cannot refer to Heracles.
- 973. $\kappa i\omega \nu$, one of the columns of the peristyle in the $\alpha \dot{v}\lambda \dot{\eta}$ of the andronitis.
- 977. ἐξελίσσων, 'chasing the boy around, about the pillar'. ἐξελίσσειν when followed by such accusatives as ἔχνος, δρόμον means 'to trace in circles'; as a military term ἐξελίσσειν φάλαγγα is used by Xen. in the sense of 'to deploy', i.e. to wheel the rear ranks so as to bring them to the front. So here ἐξελίσσειν means 'to cause to move in a circle'.
- 978. τόρνευμα is Matthiae's correction of the reading of the Florentine MS. τόρευμα. τόρν. ποδός is accusative in apposition with the sentence, like μ' μημα in 992.
 - 991. ἐντὸς τοξεύματος, too near to allow the use of the bow.
- 992. ὑπὲρ κάρα is rendered by Paley 'striking him over the head', but if this means 'over the boy's head' it is open to the twofold objection, ist that $\dot{v}\pi\dot{\epsilon}\rho$ κάρα βαλών and $\dot{\epsilon}s$ κάρα καθηκε is an irritating tautology, and 2nd that $\dot{v}\pi\dot{\epsilon}\rho$, if it can be used at all in such a manner, requires a genitive rather than an accusative. In Andr. 293 for ὑπὲρ κεφαλὰν ἔβαλεν most editors now read κεφαλαs, and in any case the sense there is 'to throw over the head'. Neither is Dobree quite right in his rendering clavam super caput suum attollens, rendered by Browning, 'hand o'er head raising his club'. βάλλειν can scarcely=attollere, έπαίρειν. Better 'striking him over his own head (i.e. having raised the hands above the head) as a smith smites the glowing mass'. In such a rendering $\dot{v}\pi\dot{\epsilon}\rho$ represents the direction of the blow as in part horizontally above the head,-not vertical, as is the case when the hands are not raised so high. Perhaps this is the best way to explain Or. 497 where the text, $\pi \lambda \eta \gamma \epsilon i s \theta \nu \gamma \alpha \tau \rho \delta s \tau \hat{\eta} s \epsilon \mu \hat{\eta} s \delta \pi \hat{\epsilon} \rho \kappa \hat{\alpha} \rho \alpha$, is generally regarded as corrupt. We may take it as meaning 'stricken with a blow from above my daughter's head', i.e. by my daughter's upraised hands.-For the adverbial use of the accus. μίμημα compare δίκην and Plato's use of εlκόνα (=instar) Crat. 400 C.
- 1002. ὡς ὁρᾶν ἐφαίνετο is to be taken with Παλλάς, 'an image (Pallas, as it seemed to our eyes)'; cp. Bacch. 1078, ἐκ δ' αἰθέρος φωνή τις, ὡς μὲν εἰκάσαι | Διόνυσος, ἀνεβόησεν. The image suggested to the minds of the audience was doubtless the colossal statue of Athene Promachus on the Acropolis, which represented the goddess as armed with a spear and crested helmet.—We have adopted Wakefield's correction of the unmeaning ἐπὶ λόφῳ κέαρ.

- 1007. 'Broken asunder by the roof's falling ruins'. It is not clear whether we are to understand the destruction of the house as the direct work of Madness, in literal fulfilment of her promise in 864, or as caused by Heracles (line 999).
- 1014. μὲν οὖν, immo vero; 'nay, so far from being εὐδαίμων, I for my part know none so wretched'.
- Tot7. The chorus in a wild chant, the metrical irregularity of which indicates feelings highly wrought, expresses its abhorrence of the unnatural deed of Heracles.—The murder of the sons of Aegyptus by the daughters of Danaus was once the most notable in Greece; but it is surpassed by this dreadful crime; I might compare with it the story of Itys, slain by his mother Procne; yet the son she slew was an only one, whereas Heracles has destroyed his three children.—The text of these lines presents more than one difficulty and the irregular character of the metre does not permit more than purely conjectural emendation. $\delta\rho$ 100 for which some editors read δ 100 for, must be taken in the sense praestantissimus, without any moral significance. π 400 π 10 in the sense praestantissimus, without any moral significance.
- 1019. παίδων is a causal genitive, 'wrought by the daughters of Danaus'; so Πρόκνης in 1022. τάλανι διογενεῖ κόρω may seem a somewhat strained use of the dativus incommodi, but it is really due to the desire for perspicuity, the genitive, Πρόκνης, being required to express the agent. So in 917 παισίν ἄταν πατέρος.
- 1021. διογενεί, 'royal,' in Homer always an epithet of kings.—By θυόμενον Μούσαιs it is meant that the legend of Procne has become a subject for song; the phrase has a Pindaric ring.—Compare Isthm. VI. 23, φλέγεται Μοίσαιs.
- 1025. The MSS readings are here hopelessly corrupt. For τὸν "Αιδα χορόν Paley suggests τίν' "Αιδα νόμον, ' what death-strain', for which it is likely that φθιτῶν ψδάν is only a gloss.
- 1029. The change of scene indicated in these lines is in reality effected by a revolution of the $\pi\epsilon\rho ia\kappa\tau\sigma\iota$. $\kappa\lambda\hat{\eta}\theta\rho a$, strictly speaking the bolts which were fitted vertically into sockets in the door-sill, is here used for the door itself; compare note on $\alpha\rho\mu\alpha\tau a$, 881.
- 1035. 'And around him are bonds and tethers, twisted and knotted, about his body'. 'Ηρ. ἀμφὶ δέμαs is added as an afterthought to explain $\pi\epsilon\rho i$...-ἐρείσματα are the props or stocks (Homeric ἔρματα), to keep a ship upright when drawn on shore; cp. Theocr. XXI. 12, γέρων δ' ἐπ' ἐρείσμασι λέμβος; similarly Heracles speaks of himself as δεσμοῖς ναῦς ὅπως ώρμισμένος, 1004.

1040. $\dot{\omega}\delta \hat{\imath}\nu\alpha$ τέκνων' 'his brood of callow nestlings'. For $\dot{\omega}\delta is$, 'the fruit of labour', comp. Aesch. Ag. 54, $\delta \epsilon \mu \nu \iota \sigma \tau \eta \rho \eta \mid \pi \delta \nu \sigma \nu \delta \rho \tau \alpha \lambda i \chi \omega \nu \delta \lambda \delta \sigma \alpha \nu \tau \epsilon s$. — $\dot{\delta}$ $\delta \dot{\epsilon} - \pi \rho \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \beta \nu s$. The substantive is added in order to identify more clearly the person meant by the pronoun, as $\alpha \dot{\nu} \tau \dot{\sigma} s \ldots \ddot{\sigma} \nu \alpha \dot{\epsilon}$ in 601-2.

1049. MSS. $\epsilon \tilde{v}$ διαύοντα ὑπνώδεά τ' which is unintelligible. The reading of the text is Kirchhoff's suggestion, but it is probable that a more radical correction is required. We suggest τὸν εΰδιον δυθ' ὑπνώδεά τ'; if that be the reading of the archetypus it is likely that the copyist's error was due to the repetition of the syllable in $\epsilon \tilde{v}$ διΟΝ ΟΝΘ'.

1053. ἐπαντέλλει, blood which being shed rises in witness against the murderer, like one who wakes from sleep; compare Aesch. Ag. 27, εὐνῆς ἐπαντείλασαν, and for the metaphor Eur. Electr. 41, εὕδοντ' ἀν ἐξήγειρε τὸν Αγαμέμνονος | φόνον.

1054. MSS. alάζετ': see on 248.

1055. Notice the change of mood in $\mu\dot{\eta}$ ἀπολεί...καταρρήξη (MSS. however καταράξη). Genuine examples of $\mu\dot{\eta}$ (=ὅπως $\mu\dot{\eta}$) followed by a future indic. are rare: with the present passage we may compare Eccl. 495, $\mu\dot{\eta}$ και τις $\dot{\eta}\mu\dot{\alpha}$ ς ὄψεται χ $\dot{\eta}\mu\dot{\omega}$ ν ἴσως κατείπη. In passages such as Od. XVI. 87, $\mu\dot{\eta}$ $\mu\nu$ κερτομέωσιν, έμοι δ' ἄχος ἔσσεται αἰνόν, it is better to take the second clause as independent of $\mu\dot{\eta}$.

1060. $\nu \alpha l$ retains here something of its original negative force; like our 'nay' it negatives the preceding phrase as not strong enough. 'Sleeps he?' 'Nay, his is a deathly sleep'. See Shilleto's Fals. $L_{\ell g}$. Appendix C.

1073. ἐπὶ κακοῖσιν, after these calamities; see on 707.

1074. 'But this I do fear, lest he kill me who am his father, and contrive ills on ills, and besides his present curse incur the guilt of a parent's blood'. Here arises a question of some intricacy; has not Heracles already by the murder of his children become guilty of σύγγονος φόνος? The answer to this appears to be that in its ordinary acceptation in Athenian law συγγένεια was limited to those degrees of relationship which are derived from parentage; consequently it was reckoned only in ascending degrees, and a man's συγγενεῖς are those relations who are connected with him by ties of blood existing at the time of birth, e.g. his parents, brothers, uncles and cousins. Isaeus (72. 12) tells us that of μετά τινος φύντες are called συγγενεῖς, but that of ἔκ τινος γεγονότες are not συγγενεῖς but ἔκγονοι, and that the latter are the father's γένος, 'offspring', not συγγένεια. If then συγγένεια be defined as congenital blood-relationship it follows that the son would regard his father as συγγενής, but the father would not so regard his son. The murder of children by their father is κοινός, αὐθέντης, παιδοφόνος (831, 839, 1201); that of Clytaemnestra by Orestes is συγγενής φόνος (Or. 411). This συγγενής φόνος according to Greek views of religion was in a far higher degree criminal than murder of persons related but not συγγενείς. Thus the Eumenides (Eum. 575) claim that Orestes' offence in killing his mother was far heavier than that of Clytaemnestra in slaying her husband, on the curious ground that Clytaemnestra οὐκ ἦν ὅμαιμος φωτὸς ὅν κατέκτανεν. In the same sense of the word συγγενής Aristotle speaks of συγγενείς τρίχες i.e. the hair of the scalp, opposed to the beard. Compare συγγενῶς in 1293.

1085. 'He will loose his frenzy again on the city of the Cadmeans'.
1091. For the brachylogy ἐν κλύδωνι πέπτωκα compare Antig. 782 ὅστ' ἐν κτήμασι πίπτεις.

1093. μετάρσι', adverbial; 'breathing hard and hurriedly'; compare the similar expressions ἀναφέρειν οι ἄνω ἔχειν πνεῦμα, and Horace's sublimis anhelitus. L. and S. explain these expressions as meaning that the breath is stopped at the upper end of the wind-pipe; Paley's explanation is more probable, viz. that the breath is projected upwards, the head being thrown back. πνευμόνων ἄπο, deep from the lungs, not merely from the mouth.

iog6. τυκίσματι, the column which was the work of the τύκος (cp. 945); MSS. read τειχίσματι.

1099. The παρασπιστής was strictly the comrade on a man's left or unguarded side; hence ἔσωζε πλευράς. By έξ έμοῦ τ' ἐσώζετο Heracles means that he had not abandoned his arms in flight.

1101—2. The reading of the Florentine MS. is in both these lines ϵls "A $\iota\delta\sigma\nu$, which in one or other case is plainly wrong. Paley's reading, which we have adopted in the text, is the most obvious of the corrections which have been suggested. He renders, 'Surely I have not descended to Hades again, after having run the course of Eurystheus out of Hades'. Dindorf regards ϵls "A $\iota\delta\sigma\nu$ μ $\sigma\lambda\omega\nu$ as merely a copyist's addition to complete a defective line.

1103. οὔτε...οὖδέ, neque...nec vero; 'no, nor Demeter's sceptred daughter'. See note, 316.

1105. The usual construction of participle with verbs expressing knowledge, perception or their opposites (e.g. $i\sigma\theta\iota$ $i\sigma\lambda\eta\rho\delta$ s $d\nu$) does not account for the use of $d\nu$ after the interrogative $\pi o\hat{v}$. We should probably read $\epsilon l\mu$.

1109. $\delta \lambda \theta \omega$, deliberative subjunctive, $\tau \hat{\omega} \nu - \delta \mu \hat{\omega} \nu - \kappa \alpha \kappa \hat{\omega} \nu$, i.e. Heracles and his slaughtered family.

9 I

1110. The reading of the text is our own correction of the MSS. $\mu\dot{\eta}$ προδφ̂ς τὰς συμφοράς. 'Yes, and I will go with you, not to desert you in your misfortunes', or perhaps 'not to abandon your unhappy family', τὰ σὰ κακά, which Amphitryon has just spoken of. We cannot admit the correctness of the usually accepted reading (first suggested by Stephens), $\mu\dot{\eta}$ προδούς τὰς συμφοράς. In order to account for the use of $\mu\dot{\eta}$ instead of οὐ with the participle προδούς in this reading editors are driven to the hypothesis that the deliberative ἔλθω of the last line is here to be repeated in a hortative sense, 'let me too go'. But it is carefully to be noted that the first pers. singular of the subjunctive is never used in a hortative sense, except when an imperative or its equivalent precedes, as in 1059 σῦγα, πνοὰς μάθω, and Bacch. 341, δεῦρό σου στέψω κάρα, 'come, let me crown thy head'.

1114. où, causal genitive; 'for which thy tears stream'.

1116. την τύχην, that disaster, hinted at in 1113.

1118. ὑπογράφεσθαι means literally to make an outline sketch over which the details of the drawing are afterwards filled in. τώμ $\hat{\varphi}$ βί φ is dative governed by ὑπογράφει. The life of Heracles is the picture of which Amphitryon's words suggest the outline. 'Tell me if thou pourtrayest a strange disaster prefiguring my life'.

1119. φράσαιμεν ἄν is to be taken as a simple future, φράσω, otherwise εἴης would of course be required in the protasis.— κιδου βάκχος, 'wild votarist of Death'; i.e. possessed with frenzy inspired not by Dionysus but by Hades; compare 894. The same expression is used Hipp. 550, Hec. 1076.

1121. $\kappa \alpha l... \ddot{\eta} \delta \eta = \kappa \alpha l \delta \dot{\eta}$.

1126. 'Well, since $(\gamma d\rho)$ your silence tells me enough, I care not to inquire'. The reading of the text is our own suggestion for MSS. $d\rho\kappa\epsilon\hat{\imath}$ $\sigma\iota\omega\pi\hat{\eta}$ $\gamma\hat{a}\rho$ $\kappa\tau\lambda$. Nauck and Dindorf read $d\rho\kappa\epsilon\hat{\imath}$ $\sigma\iota\omega\pi\hat{\eta}$ $\gamma\hat{a}\rho$ $\mu\alpha\theta\epsilon\hat{\imath}\nu$ δ $\betaούλομαι$; 'Will silence tell me what I want to know?' It seems more probable that Heracles from the reticence of Amphitryon draws the inference that he has committed some discreditable act, and accordingly refrains from further questions, until his curiosity is aroused anew by the mention of Hera. An alternative suggestion might be $d\rho\kappa\epsilon\hat{\imath}s$ $\sigma\iota\omega\pi\hat{\eta}$ $\gamma\hat{a}\rho$ $\kappa\tau\lambda$, 'since you tell me enough by keeping silence'.— For the sense cp. fragm. 967, $\dot{\eta}$ $\gamma\hat{a}\rho$ $\sigma\iota\omega\pi\hat{\eta}$ $\tau\hat{o}\hat{\imath}s$ $\sigmao\phi\hat{o}\hat{\imath}\sigma\nu$ $\dot{a}\pi\delta\kappa\rho\iota\sigma\imaths$.

1127. 'Dost witness here throned Hera's work' (Browning).

1129. $\pi \epsilon \rho \iota \sigma \tau \epsilon \lambda \lambda \epsilon \sigma \theta \alpha \iota$, to arrange as it were a garment about one's person; hence, generally, to attend to, like $\kappa \sigma \sigma \mu \epsilon \hat{v}$. Browning, 'bury thine own guilt', but in this sense the active $\pi \epsilon \rho \iota \sigma \tau \epsilon \lambda \lambda \epsilon \iota v$ is required.

- 1136. It is highly probable that we should read as one word κακαγγελών, in accordance with Photius' dictum εὐαγγελεῖν ὑφ' ἐν λέγουσι καὶ κακαγγελεῖν. Thus in a tragic senarius ap. Dem. 315, κακαγγελεῖν μὲν ἴσθι μὴ θέλοντ' ἐμέ. In Plato, Rep. 432 D, and Theact. 144 B, it is possible that we should restore εὐαγγελεῖs for the MSS. reading εὖ ἀγγέλλειs: see Rutherford, New Phrynichus, p. 335. Compare κακάγγελος, Aesch. Ag. 636.
- 1142. 'Did I demolish my own house, or did I incite others to do so?'
- 1145. $\dot{\eta}\gamma\nu l\zeta ou \pi\nu \rho l$, when you were purifying your hands from the blood of Lycus with the $\chi \ell\rho\nu\iota\psi$ in which the torch was dipped; see 928.
- 1146—7. Paley is no doubt right in rejecting these lines as a spurious supplement to $\delta \mu \omega \iota$, which should stand extra metrum as ξa in 1088. $\gamma \epsilon$ is entirely meaningless, nor does Schaefer improve matters by reading $\tau \iota$ $\delta \hat{\eta} \tau a$. In 1148 MSS, have $\kappa \omega \iota \kappa$.
- 1148. πέτρας ἄλματα, 'a leap from a rock', as πετραΐον ἄλμα in Ion, 1268.
- 1151. Something is wanted to complete this verse; Nauck reads $\ddot{\eta}$ σάρκα τήνδε τὴν ἐμὴν πρήσας πυρί, to which Paley objects that if τήνδε had been used τὴν ἐμὴν would be superfluous.
 - 1152. Take βίου with δύσκλειαν, and compare 1369.
- 1154. In Heracl. 207 foll. Euripides clearly explains the relationship existing between Heracles and Theseus. Alcmene and Aethra, mother of Theseus, were first cousins, being both of them grand-daughters of Pelops. From patriotic motives the poet is anxious to emphasize this relationship, in order to bring the enchorian hero of Athens into connection with the wider circle of Hellenic legend.
- 1159. The Florentine MS. has φέρ', ἀντί...κρατί. Paley suggests some such participle as ἀντιτείνων to fill the lacuna.
- 1161. 'I do not wish by casting on him the pollution of murder to injure the innocent',—the mere sight of a murderer being supposed to convey contamination. The reading we have adopted is Nauck's, for MSS. $\pi\rho\sigma\sigma\lambda\alpha\beta\omega\nu$, which Paley, Dindorf and others keep, reading $\tau\hat{\omega}\nu\delta\epsilon$,—'having taken on myself in addition to Lycus' murder the murder of these children'; but surely if Heracles, after all the horrors that have since happened, had still any thought for the comparatively venial offence of slaying Lycus, the allusion would have been expressed more explicitly.

- 1169. ων υπηρξεν, quae prior in me contulit, Pflugk.
- 1171. ὑμᾶs. δεῖ is more commonly followed by the dative of the person, but compare P. V. 86, αὐτὸν γάρ σε δεῖ Προμηθέωs.
- 1173. 'Surely I have not been out-paced and come too late to stay dire calamities'. For νεώτερος in the sense of 'violent', 'revolutionary' see L. and S.
 - 1175. $\gamma \epsilon \gamma \hat{\omega} \sigma \alpha \nu \text{ simply} = o \hat{v} \sigma \alpha \nu$, as $\gamma \epsilon \gamma \hat{\omega} \tau \epsilon s$ in 251.
- 1176. δορός γε. The vein of thought implied by γε is,—The murder of boys and women betokens not π όλεμος και μάχη (as he had anticipated), but ν εώτερα κακά, for with battle boys have no concern.
- 1178. ἐλαιοφόρον ὅχθον, the Acropolis of Athens, where grew the sacred olive planted by Athena.
- 1179. ἐκάλεσας: for the tense see 524. 'Why this address preluding sorrow?'
- 1183. The active and middle, $\xi \tau \epsilon \kappa \epsilon$ and $\tau \epsilon \kappa \delta \mu \epsilon \nu \sigma$, used together of the same person are remarkable. It might be supposed that $\tau i \kappa \tau \epsilon \sigma \theta a \iota$ was used of the male, $\tau i \kappa \tau \epsilon \nu$ of the female, but in practice Attic observes no such distinction.
- 1185. 'Would that I could obey thy bidding!' So in Ajax, 591, to Tecmessa's entreaty, εθφημα φώνει, Ajax retorts τοις ἀκούουσιν λέγε, 'find some one else to list to thy bidding', and Prometheus, turning a deaf ear to the admonitions of Hermes, says είδοτι τοι μοι τάσδ' ἀγγελίας | ὅδ' ἐθώνξεν (Ρ. V. 1040).
- 1188. Both $\delta \rho \dot{a} \sigma as$ and $\pi \lambda a \gamma \chi \theta \epsilon is$ are nom. to a verb such as $\ell \kappa a \nu \epsilon$ in 1183.
- 1190. 'With arrows dipped in the hydra's blood'; cp. Trach. 574 and supra, 424. L. and S. are wrong in supposing that it means the robe dipped in the hydra's blood. According to the Sophoclean legend the poisoned shirt was tinged with the blood of the centaur Nessus. Euripides makes no allusion to that story.
- 1201. For this very difficult line the rendering of Hermann has usually been accepted as the most satisfactory; 'a counterbalancing weighty motive, viz. the entreaties of Theseus, fights against thy tears'; but to us the meaning thus given to $\beta\acute{a}\rho$ os appears wholly artificial. It would be possible to render, 'He (i.e. Heracles) is in the throes of a heaviness too great for tears'. $\beta\acute{a}\rho$ os, like $\acute{a}\chi\theta$ os, often means 'heavy grief', and would in this rendering be a species of cognate accus. after $\dot{a}\mu\iota\lambda\lambda\hat{a}\tau a\iota$ as in the expression $\pi o\hat{\iota}$ ov $\dot{a}\mu\iota\lambda\lambda a\theta\hat{\omega}$ $\gamma\acute{o}$ or, Hel. 165. $\beta\acute{a}\rho$ os $\dot{a}\nu\tau\acute{\iota}\pi a\lambda o\nu$ $\delta a\kappa\rho\acute{\iota}$ ous, a weight of sorrow that counterbalances tears, i.e. neutralizes or prevents them, as in Pindar, Ol. VIII. 71, μένος γήραος ἀντίπαλον, 'strength beyond (lit. that countervails) his years'.

1208. For the singular προσπίτνων comp. 858.

- 1210. κατάσχε (for κατάσχεs) is a form which though rare is admitted by Curtius (Gk. Verb, p. 299 Eng. transl.) as genuine. παράσχε is the traditional reading in Hec. 842, and there is MS. authority for $\dot{\epsilon}\pi l\sigma\chi\epsilon$ and $\mu\epsilon\tau\dot{\alpha}\sigma\chi\epsilon$. Elmsley and editors generally read here κατάσχεθε.
 - 1212. έξάγει, cp. 776.
- 1221. ἐκεῖσ ἀνοιστέον: you must look for the source of this sympathy which I bear towards you alike in good or evil fortune to the time when you brought me safe to light from the dead.
- 1232. τὰ τῶν θεῶν, i.e. the sun, since according to popular fancy any hateful crime polluted the light to which it was exposed. For the sentiment comp. Soph. Ant. 1044, θεοὺς μιαίνειν οὕτις ἀνθρώπων σθένει.
- 1234. ἀλάστωρ, the avenging spirit, whose malevolence extended to the whole kindred of the criminal, and by marriage might be transferred from one family to another; thus Jason says of Medea, των σων ἀλάστορ εls ξμ ἔσκηψαν θεοι. But, says Theseus, the relations of friendship afford no such medium of communication.
 - 1235. $\epsilon \pi \acute{\eta} \nu \epsilon \sigma'$, see 275, note.
- 1238. 'I weep for thy sake at thy misfortunes'. ἔτερος is often used euphemistically for κακός, as Soph. Phil. 503, παθεῖν μὲν εὖ, παθεῖν δε θἄτερα. So in Latin si quid aliter (i.e. male) acciderit, si secus evenerit. But from the form of Heracles' question; 'Why, have you ever seen others more miserable than I?' we may suppose that he understands ἐψ' ἐτέραισι συμφοραῖς to mean 'for others' woes'.
- 1241. ὥστε κατθανεῖν brings out the notion of intention more definitely than a simple infinitive would do; 'Therefore am I fixed in the intent to die'.
- 1243. $\pi\rho\delta s$, i.e. $\alpha \vartheta\theta\delta\delta \eta s$ $\epsilon i\mu l$ $\pi\rho\delta s$, as the gods reck not for me neither care I for them.
- 1245. 'Already am I full-fraught with woes and lack space for further burthen'. $\delta \eta = \mathring{\eta} \delta \eta$ as in 867. For $\gamma \epsilon \mu \omega$ in this sense compare Theaet. 144 B, $\mathring{\alpha} \nu \epsilon \rho \mu \mathring{\alpha} \tau \iota \sigma \tau a$ ('unballasted') $\pi \lambda \circ \mathring{\alpha} \ldots \lambda \mathring{\eta} \theta \eta s$ $\gamma \dot{\epsilon} \mu \nu \tau \iota \theta \dot{\epsilon} \nu \tau \iota \theta \dot{\epsilon} \nu a \iota$ is commonly used=stow in the hold.
- 1248. ἐπιτυχόντος, any man one meets by chance; the 'average, ordinary' man. Euripides is followed by Aristotle and Plato in the Ethics and Phaedo in his attack on the popular Greek view that suicide is under certain circumstances allowable and even praiseworthy.

Throughout this scene it is to be noticed that Theseus is the exponent of the clear and common-sense, if somewhat cynical, views of an educated Athenian, in opposition to the pseudo-heroics of Sparto-Dorian sentiment.

- 1251. Supply ἔτλην from the line above. 'Is it Heracles, styled "the much-enduring" (δή) who talks thus?' 'Nay, I never endured such suffering as now, if my toils are to be measured', i.e. if one can talk of greater or less in the case of such vast labours as mine have been. Paley, after Hermann, reads οὐκοῦν τοσαῦτά γ' ἐν μέτρφ μοχθητέον, i.e. endurance has its limits.
- 1254. ἀνέχεσθαι in the sense 'to suffer' is usually followed by a participle, e.g. 222, 1319 of this play: indeed tragedy does not afford any other instance of this construction of acc. and infin. In Eum. 914 we have οὐκ ἀνέξομαι τὸ μὴ οὐ...τιμᾶν.
- 1256. ἀναπτύξω like δείκνυμ, ἐλέγχω and other verbs of showing or proving naturally takes a participle and not an infinitive after it; generally this participle belongs either to the subject or object of the verb, e.g. εὐρίσκομαι ἀδικῶν, ἐπιδεῖξαί τινα φονέα ὅντα: if however the participle of an impersonal verb is used in this construction it stands in the neuter singular. The personal and impersonal constructions are both illustrated by Thuc. VII. 5, καὶ διανοεῖσθαι οὕτως ἐκέλευεν αὐτοὺς ώς τŷ μὲν παρασκευŷ οὐκ ἕλασσον ἕξοντας, τŷ δὲ γνώμη οὐκ ἀνεκτὸν ἐσόμενον εί...
- 1258. ὅστις which is strictly indefinite is sometimes used, like Latin qui with the subjunctive, to designate an individual when that individual is regarded as forming one of a class. Comp. P. V. 38, τί τὸν θεοῖς ἔχθιστον οὐ στυγεῖς θεόν, ὅστις τὸ σὸν θνητοῖσι προὕδωκεν γέρας;

'one who (such a miscreant that he) betrayed'. Hipp. 943, $\sigma\kappa\dot{\epsilon}\psi\alpha\sigma\theta\epsilon$ δ' ἐs τόνδ' ὅστις ἐξ ἐμοῦ γεγὼς | ἤσχυνε τὰμὰ λέκτρα, 'a wretch who, though my son, defiled my marriage bed'.

- 1263. ὅστις ὁ Zεύς, whatever Zeus may be, i.e. that Zeus I speak of. Compare fragm. 483 (Dindorf), Zεὺς, ὅστις ὁ Ζεὺς, οὐ γὰρ οἶδα πλὴν λόγφ. The article is thus regularly employed where a word is repeated: see note on 269.
- 1267. Nauck reads $\ell \pi \epsilon \iota \sigma \ell \phi \rho \eta \kappa \epsilon$, a form of the aorist given by the MSS. in Eur. Elect. 1033. Hesychius also mentions $\ell \xi \ell \phi \rho \eta \kappa \epsilon \nu = d\phi \hat{\eta} \kappa \epsilon \nu$, whence Nauck (wrongly according to G. Curtius) concludes that $\phi \rho \ell \omega$ is formed by coalescence of $\pi \rho \delta$ with the stem of $\ell \eta \mu \iota$.

1269. $\pi \epsilon \rho \iota \beta \delta \lambda \alpha \alpha \sigma \alpha \rho \kappa \delta s$, like $\sigma \alpha \rho \kappa \delta s$ ξυδυτα in Bacch. 746, is only a periphrasis for $\sigma \delta \alpha \rho \kappa \alpha$; as Elmsley explains it 'ipsa caro, quod ossium tegumentum est'. Hence $\dot{\eta} \beta \hat{\omega} \nu \tau \alpha$ is made to agree with the compound expression, rather than with $\sigma \alpha \rho \kappa \delta s$. 'Flesh-livery of youth'.

1271. molous, 'Was there ever lion or Typhon?' See 518, note.

1272. Nauck (after Elmsley) reads Γηρύοναs instead of Tυφωναs: but though the epithet τρισωμάτουs is doubtless applicable to Geryon rather than to Typhon Eur. means not the individual giant but all monsters of his class. Compare the plurals 'Αλκμήναs, 'Αλόπαs, Σεμέλαs in Aves 559.

1273. $\epsilon \xi ' ' μν υ \sigma \alpha$ in the sense 'to accomplish' strictly applies only to $\pi \delta \lambda \epsilon \mu \nu \nu$; as applied to its other objects it has the meaning 'to slay, despatch', conficere, a use of the word which occurs in Homer.

1275. Dindorf omits τ', which is a mistake due to not observing that ἄλλων τε is to be taken in close connection with κάς νεκρούς ἀφικόμην. Compare note on 425. Transl. 'and, to crown the countless hosts of toils which I went through, I went to the dead'.

1280. $\theta \rho \nu \gamma \kappa \hat{\omega} \sigma a \iota$, the metaphor continues that of 1261: begun by the murder of Electryon by his son-in-law the structure is completed by the murder of Heracles' children by their father.

1281. $o\tilde{v}\tau\epsilon$ ought strictly to be followed by another $o\tilde{v}\tau\epsilon$ or $\tau\epsilon$: but owing to the parenthesis $\tilde{\eta}\nu$ $\delta\epsilon...\tilde{\epsilon}\chi\omega$, the form of the sentence is changed at 1285 to a question. Compare 63, where $o\tilde{v}\tau\epsilon$ is followed after a parenthesis by $\kappa a i$.

1282. ἢν δὲ καὶ μένω, 'and if I do stay'.

1284. 'Mine is no curse that permits address'. Any conversation with a murderer was deemed to involve pollution: comp. Eum. 448, $\delta\phi\theta \circ \gamma \circ \nu$ είναι τὸν παλαμναῖον νόμος.

1285. ἔλθω—ὀρμήσω—ὑποβλεπώμεθα: these subjunctives require care in translation. The first is deliberative, 'am I to go?' ὁρμήσω however, as shown by φέρε, is strictly hortative, 'Let me, we will say, (δη) go to some other city—and there be looked on with suspicion, as a marked man'. The answer to this suggestion comes in 1291, 'Nay, but a man once reputed happy finds such changes painful'. The mood of ὑποβλεπώμεθα is due to attraction to that of ὀρμήσω, since 1287—90 do not form a part of the supposed recommendation, and would more naturally run ἔπειτα δὲ ὑποβλεποίμεθα ἄν.

1288. κληδουχεῖν means to act as κληδούχος or custodian of the temple of a god; here if κληδουχούμενοι be not corrupt (as Dindorf thinks it) it must mean 'kept under watch', i.e. by enemies who would seize the first opportunity of injuring him. Paley well compares Ion, 603 (where Ion is speaking of the reception which he, as an alien settled at Athens, may expect from its jealous citizens), τῶν δ' αὖ λογίων τε χρωμένων τε τ \hat{y} πόλει εἰς ἀξίωμα βὰς πλέον φρουρήσομαι ψήφοισι.

1290. 'Will he not be gone with a curse on him?' Compare Ar. Eq. 892, οὐκ ἐς κόρακας ἀποφθερεῖ; 1293. συγγενώς, 'congenitally', i.e. born to sorrow: compare note on σύγγονον, 1076.

1302. We have adopted Paley's suggestion β lov ζαχρεῖον for MSS. β lov τ' ἀχρεῖον. ζαχρεῖ' ἔπη has been restored in Aesch. Suppl. 194 for τὰ χρεῖ' ἔπη.

1304. MSS. have here κρούουσ' 'Ολυμπίου Ζηνὸς ἀρβύλη πόδα: Ζηνός has here apparently crept in from the preceding line. Of many proposed corrections we have adopted Nauck's as simplest and least arbitrary. It is however quite possible that the MSS. reading is right. As Paley remarks κρούευν πόδα, 'stamp the foot', is probably correct, as it occurs in other instances, e.g. Eur. Εl. 180, ἐλικτὸν κρούσω πόδ' ἐμών: and Hera may be said to stamp the foot with the shoe of Zeus, probably as a signal to begin the dance just as in Tro. 150 Hecuba leans on Priam's staff when she gives the signal for the dance by stamping with the foot on the ground. On the other hand such Latin expressions as Phoebe medium pulsabat Olympum (Aen. X. 216) and Ennius' Musae, quae pedibus magnum pulsatis Olympum favour the construction of Nauck's reading.

1306. αὐτοῖσιν βάθροις, 'base and all'; the metaphor is taken from ϵ statue overthrown along with its pedestal.

1312. One or more lines are here undoubtedly wanting. Theseus is evidently resuming his argument against suicide, and what Euripides intends him to say is probably to this effect, 'I cannot recommend you to die by your own hand, rather than continue to suffer' (such is the force of the present $\pi \acute{a}\sigma \chi \epsilon \nu$).

1315. οὐ and not μή after εἴπερ here, because the negative coalesces with ψενδεῖς so as to = dψενδεῖς. So Plato, Αροί. 25 Β, έἀν τε οὐ φῆτε, έἀν τε φῆτε, 'whether you assert or deny it', Αjax, 1131, εἰ τοὺς θανόντας οὐκ ἐᾶς θάπτειν, 'if thou forbiddest'.

1316. $\tau\epsilon$ anticipates that the sentence will be continued $\kappa a \lambda \delta \epsilon \sigma \mu o i \sigma \iota$ —instead of which the question is repeated.

- 1317. διὰ τυραννίδας, 'in order to gain sovereignty'; the story referred to is that of the chaining of Cronos by Zeus, but the directness of the allusion is veiled by the use of the plural.
- 1319. Euripides indifferently uses the forms $d\nu\epsilon\sigma\chi\delta\mu\eta\nu$ (e.g. Hipp. 687) and $d\nu\epsilon\sigma\chi\delta\mu\eta\nu$, 'they tolerated their past errors', i.e. they were not driven to desperation by a sense of guilt.
- 1329. $\tau \epsilon \mu \dot{\epsilon} \nu \eta$, plots of land cut off from the public land and appropriated to a king or hero; such a piece of land was assigned by the Lycians to Bellerophontes (Iliad VI. 193). Euripides alludes to the story given in Plutarch, Vita Thes. 35, that Theseus dedicated to Heracles the various $\tau \epsilon \mu \dot{\epsilon} \nu \eta$ which the Athenians had given him, changing their name from $\Theta \eta \sigma \epsilon \dot{\epsilon} a$ to $\Pi \rho a \kappa \lambda \epsilon \hat{\epsilon} a$.
- 1330. κεκλήσεται ἐπωνομασμένα σέθεν, 'shall be called after your name'. σέθεν depends on ἐπωνομασμένα: for the construction comp. Pindar, Ol. IX. 96, μάτρωος δ' ἐκάλεσσέ νιν ἰσώνυμον ἔμμεν, 'he called him after the name of his mother's father'.
- 1331. θανόντος, i.e. σοῦ, gen. absolute, though the construction strictly requires that the participle should agree with the object of dν dξει. Dindorf and Nauck quite needlessly read θανόντα. A strong instance of this preference of the absolute to the ordinary construction is in Tro. 75–6,
 - ΑΘ. δύσνοστον αὐτοῖς νόστον ἐμβάλλειν θέλω. ΠΟΣ. ἐν γῆ μενόντων, ἢ καθ' ἀλμυρὰν λίβα;
- 1332. Paley is probably right in understanding λαΐνοισιν έξογκώμασιν to mean cenotaphs which served the purpose of altars, on which offerings were burnt to propitiate the deceased hero. Compare the expression δγκοῦν τινὰ τάφφ.
- 1333. ἀνάξει τίμιον, 'exalt to honour'. For ἀνάγειν compare Ajax, 131, ἡμέρα κλίνει τε κὰνάγει πάλιν | ἄπαντα τάνθρώπεια.
- 1334. Έλλήνων ὕπο, 'to be well spoken of by the Hellenes for their service to a brave man'. Compare Thuc. I. 130, ὧν καὶ πρότερον $\dot{\epsilon}\nu$ μεγάλω ἀξιώματι ὑπὸ τῶν Ἑλλήνων.—ὑφελοῦνταs, for which we might have expected ἀφελοῦσι in agreement with ἀστοῖs, is attracted into construction with the infinitive.
- 1338—9. These verses, which are almost identical with Or. 667—8, are probably a copyist's 'tag'. οὐδὲν δεῖ φίλων violates the law of the final cretic, though it would be easy to read οὐδέ. For ἄλις δ θεδς δφελῶν, 'it is enough if the god help', compare O.T. 1061, ἄλις νοσοῦσ' ἐγώ.

- 1340. 'Alas, this is all beside the question of my troubles'; as regards them your stories of the gods are nothing to the point.
- 1342. στέργειν, 'to acquiesce in, tolerate', refers to ἡνέσχοντό θ' ἡμαρτηκότες: so Soph. Trach. 276, Zεὐs...οὐκ ἡνέσχετο, | ὕβριν γὰρ οὐ στέργουσιν οὐδὲ δαίμονες.—'And as for putting their hands in chains, I never rated them so low, nor will I believe it,—no, nor that one god is lord over another'.
- 1347. ἐσκεψάμην has here the force of a perfect, and hence it is followed by a subjunctive $\mu\dot{\eta}$ ὅφλω instead of an optative. 'However I have entertained a doubt lest, though in distress, I should perchance win the name of coward, if I kill myself'. $\mu\dot{\eta}$ expresses apprehension as ἐσκεψάμην practically = δέδια. Compare Plato, Parm. 130 D, $\dot{\eta}$ δη $\mu\acute{\epsilon}\nu\tau o\iota$ ποτέ $\mu\epsilon$ καὶ ἔθραξε $\mu\dot{\eta}$ τι $\dot{\eta}$ περὶ πάντων ταὐτόν, 'I have had a disquieting doubt lest the rule hold good for all'. It is not strictly correct to regard the sentence $\mu\dot{\eta}$ ὄφλω as dependent interrogative. There is no evidence to prove that $\mu\dot{\eta}$ ever had the interrogative force of Latin enclitic -ne in dependent question. (See Goodwin, Moods and Tenses, p. 84.)
- 1351. ἐγκαρτερήσω, 'I will patiently await death', i.e. and not commit suicide. In Andr. 262, ἐγκαρτερεῖς δἡ θάνατον has an opposite meaning, 'so you brave death'. Compare the ambiguous sense which is given to 'endure' in King Lear, Act 5, Scene 2 (where Edgar is dissuading his father from a voluntary death), 'Men must endure Their going hence, even as their coming hither: Ripeness is all'.
- 1361. ἐμὲ γὰρ οὐκ ἐᾶ νόμος, i.e. θάπτειν αὐτούς. νόμος is 'popular feeling'; it was supposed that the spirits of the dead would be disquieted if one who had caused their death took part in the obsequies; thus Electra severely rebukes the audacity of Clytaemnestra in sending δυσμενεῖς χοάς to the tomb of the husband whose death she had compassed. (Soph. El. 440.)
- 1362. 'Pillowing them on their mother's breast and folding them in her arms,—ah, piteous embrace, since it was I, alas! who unwittingly slew them'. For $\kappa \omega \nu \omega \nu \ell a$ in the sense of 'companionship' (here $\mu \eta \tau \rho \delta s$ kal $\tau \epsilon \kappa \nu \omega \nu \ell a$ in the sense of 'companionship' (between them's kal $\tau \epsilon \kappa \nu \omega \nu \omega \nu \ell a$), compare 1377. Porson (on Phoen. 16) takes $\kappa \omega \nu \omega \nu \ell a$ here in the sense of 'our common children'; but though the context indicates that such is the meaning of $\pi a \ell \delta \omega \nu \kappa \omega \nu \omega \nu \ell a \nu$ in that passage it is unnecessary to limit $\kappa \omega \nu \omega \nu \ell a$ to that sense here. $\kappa \omega \nu \omega \nu \ell a \nu$ is an accusative in apposition with the sentence, which may very well be compared with 675, $\dot{\alpha} \delta \ell \sigma \tau a \nu \sigma \nu \zeta \nu \gamma \ell a \nu$, and $\ddot{\eta} \nu$ stands by a species of attraction for ove. Heracles has destroyed not the κοινωνία itself, but the mother and children clasped in one embrace.

1365. οἶκει, 'live on in this city; it may be hard, yet still constrain thyself to bear my sorrow with me'. ψυχήν may very likely simply = σεαυτόν, as ψυχήν τινος is often put periphrastically for the man himself. But it may equally possibly mean 'the vital principle'; 'put constraint on thy life', i.e. 'constrain thyself by living to bear my sorrow with me'. In ordinary language βιάζεσθαι ἐαυτόν means 'to lay violent hands on oneself', but in the case of one who resists a natural prompting to self-destruction the meaning is inverted, as in the case of ἐγκαρτερήσω θάνατον, 1351.

1368. For the MSS, reading $\mathring{ω}νασθε$ we have with some diffidence substituted $\mathring{ω}νησθε$: there is no evidence for the existence of the form $\mathring{ω}νάμην$, earlier than Lucian, whereas metre requires $\mathring{ω}νήμεθα$ in Alc. 335. In Greek of the Classical period α appears with certainty only in the optative $\mathring{ο}ναίμην$ and infinitive $\mathring{ο}νασθαι$. (Rutherford, New Phrynichus, p. 63.)

1369. βίου, Dobree's correction for βίq.—εὕκλειαν βίου, 'an honoured life'.

1371. ἀπώλεσα is balanced with ἔσωζες: my destroying thee was no fit reward for your preserving your plighted faith to me. There is a similar play on the double sense of σώζειν, 'to keep' and 'to keep alive', in 1100.

1380. $\dot{\eta}\mu\hat{\nu}\nu$ should not be regarded as a dative of the agent, which only occurs after passive verbs, and is generally limited to the perfect. It should be remembered that inanimate objects are here supposed to be speaking, and that $\dot{\eta}\mu\hat{\nu}\nu$ is therefore equivalent to a dative of the instrument, $\tau\hat{\sigma}$ is $\sigma\hat{\sigma}$ is $\sigma\hat{\tau}$ hous.

1382. τι φάσκων; 'what can I allege?' in answer to these reproaches of theirs.

1387. 'Help to settle the reward for bringing the dog', promised by Eurystheus for bringing Cerberus from Hades. As we are told at the beginning of the play this consisted in the restoration of the family of Heracles to their native land of Argos; here, as in the Heraclidae, the poet is anxious to connect Theseus and his sons with the return of the Heraclidae. The friendly offices of Theseus to Heracles are intended to prefigure and to draw closer the friendly relations existing between Athens and Argos during the Peloponnesian war.

1396. $\gamma \acute{a}\rho$ here almost resolves itself into its elements $\gamma \epsilon \acute{a}\rho a$. 'Yes, it seems that calamity brings low even the mightiest'. Cobet unnecessarily substitutes $\acute{a}\rho a$.

- 1399. μή, i.e. ὅρα μή.
- 1407. $\dot{\omega}s$ $\delta\dot{\eta}$ τl ; i.e. $\theta \dot{\epsilon} \lambda \omega \nu$. 'Why this petition? Will you be easier in mind if you get that to solace you?'
- 1409. $l\delta o \dot{v}$ τάδ', i.e. τὰ στέρνα. $l\delta o \dot{v}$ is commonly used in giving assent, e.g. Ar. Nubes 81, Strepsiades, κύσον με και τὴν χεῖρα δὸς τὴν δεξιάν. Pheidippides, $l\delta o \dot{v}$, 'there you are'. Compare 319.—τάμὰ σπεύδεις φίλα, 'you crave what I too wish'.
- 1410. 'Are you so oblivious of all your former sufferings', as to give way to this, though you endured them without idle lamentations? (v. 1353).
- 1413. τω σοι ταπεινός; 'Have I spared my life to become so humbled in your sight? Yet I think it was not once so'. 'Yes, humbled you are certainly, since in what respect are you now the renowned Heracles of yore?' $\kappa \epsilon \hat{\nu}$ os 'Ηρακλής, like illo Hectore (Aen. II. 274), 'the Heracles of other days'. ποῦ gives a tone of contemptuous incredulity to the question.' The Florentine MS. has ζωσοι ταπεινός ἀλλὰ προσθείναι δοκώ, 'by living to be scorned by you, I think I have added fresh evils to all my former ones'.
- 1416. παντός is probably neuter as in παντός μάλλον, ita ut nihil supra. 'As for courage I was weaker than aught you can conceive'.
- 1417. 'How then can you say of me that I am made little $(\tau \alpha \pi \epsilon \iota \nu \delta s)$ by calamity?' Compare fragm. 724, $\tau \dot{\alpha} \tau \sigma \iota \mu \dot{\epsilon} \gamma \iota \sigma \tau \alpha \pi \sigma \lambda \lambda \dot{\alpha} \kappa \iota s \theta \dot{\epsilon} \dot{\delta} s \mid \tau \alpha \pi \dot{\epsilon} \iota \nu'$ $\dot{\epsilon} \theta \eta \kappa \epsilon \kappa \kappa \dot{\alpha} \dot{\alpha} \sigma \iota \nu' \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \tau \dot{\epsilon} \iota \lambda \dot{\epsilon} \nu \pi \dot{\alpha} \lambda \iota \nu$. MSS. read $\pi \dot{\omega} s \dot{\sigma} \dot{\nu} \dot{\epsilon} \dot{\tau}' \dot{\epsilon} \dot{\iota} \pi \eta s$. Paley reads $\pi \dot{\omega} s \dot{\sigma} \dot{\nu} \dot{\epsilon} \dot{\mu}' \dot{\epsilon} \dot{\epsilon} \pi \sigma \iota s$ on the ground that the emphatic $\dot{\epsilon} \mu \dot{\epsilon}$ is required by the context; he justifies the omission of $\dot{\alpha} \nu$ by reference to Phoen. 1201 and Iph. Aul. 1210. Perhaps $\pi \dot{\omega} s \dot{\sigma} \dot{\nu} \dot{\epsilon} \dot{\mu}' \dot{\epsilon} \dot{\iota} \pi \alpha s$.
 - 1421. $\pi \epsilon \mu \psi \circ \mu \alpha \iota = \mu \epsilon \tau \alpha \pi \epsilon \mu \psi \circ \mu \alpha \iota$, 'I will send for you'.
- 1422. 'Take within the house the children whom it is hard for the earth to bear', as being a pollution to the land.
- 1428. τὰ μέγιστα, neuter for masculine as 586, τὰ ἐχθρὰ μισεῖν: Persae, 1, τάδε μὲν Περσῶν...πιστὰ καλεῖται, i. e. ἡμεῖς καλούμεθα Πιστοί.
